BCRIC buying into big ones

20% of Kaiser, 14% of MacBlo eyed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Less than 24 hours after it announced plans to purchase more than 14 per cent of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s common shares, the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. said it has been granted an option to buy a substantial minority position in B.C.-based Kaiser Resources Ltd.

Trading in shares of both Kaiser and BCRIC remained halted four hours after the Toronto Stock Exchange opened at 7 a.m.

Trading in BCRIC shares resumed in Toronto before closing and rose ⅛ to $8¾. At the Vancouver Stock Exchange, BCRIC shares led industrial trading at noon, gaining .22 to $8.85.

BCRIC president David Helliwell said in a news release the option was granted by Kaiser Steel Corp. of Oakland, Calif., at $44 a share, up to and including April 15, 1980.

The purchase would involve all of Kaiser Steel Corp.'s shares of Kaiser Resources that are not purchased by Kaiser Resources through its current tender offer for its own shares.

Helliwell said the option is subject to approval of Kaiser Steel's board of directors.

He said BCRIC moved to obtain the option because of Kaiser Resources' strong position on coal development in Western Canada, primarily in the east Kootenays area of eastern B.C.

Kaiser Resources said that following the pro rata purchase of its shares from Kaiser Steel, BCRIC should wind up owning between 21 and 24 per cent of outstanding Kaiser Resources shares.

In that event, Kaiser Resources said it will invite BCRIC's chief executive officer to become a member of its board of directors.

Kaiser also announced today it is increasing to $44 from $43 a share the price of its pro rata tender offer to shareholders made Feb. 15 to purchase up to nine million of the company's 27 million outstanding shares.

On Monday, BCRIC announced an agreement in principle to buy more than 14 per cent of MacMillan Bloedel's common shares, including Canadian Pacific Investment Ltd's 13.4-per-cent share of the forest products firm, largest in B.C.

The purchase will cost more than $107 million of the estimated $500 million in cash BCRIC accumulated during the government-inspired share giveaway and sale last summer.

Helliwell said in a statement the agreement means BCRIC will buy the 13.4 per cent of MacMillan Bloedel shares owned by CP Investments.

BCRIC is also contemplating purchase of another one per cent of MacMillan Bloedel's shares held in five pension plans associated with Canadian Pacific Ltd.

Sale price of the 2,849,600 shares held by CP Investments will be $35 each. MacMillan Bloedel shares were trading at $33 each at the market close Monday.

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY

The son of an elderly woman waiting for cataract surgery came forward today to defend Victoria eye specialist Dr. Don North.

Ken Leighton, whose mother is North's patient, said the hospital waiting list problem is as critical as North claims.

Leighton said his 85-year-old mother gets more depressed every day waiting for cataract surgery she won't be able to have for at least seven months.

Mrs. Leighton was told last July she needed the operation, but was unable to undergo surgery at Victoria General Hospital in September as scheduled because of a respiratory illness.

His mother recovered and saw Dr. North for the first time Dec. 31, when the doctor told her the operation was "long overdue."

However, North's receptionist said today surgery dates can't be booked until September or October.

North is limited by the hospital to two operations a week and Victoria General will not book surgery more than six months in advance.

Dr. North has a list of patients waiting to get on the hospital's waiting list, the receptionist said.

The doctor can't favor some patients over others by referring them for urgent surgery.

They're all serious cases, she said.

Dr. North was accused by Health Minister Rafe Mair of making inflammatory remarks about delays in hospital admissions.

Dr. North says the minister attacked him as an easy way out.

Mair said allegations by Dr. North several weeks ago that an elderly cataract patient became irreversibly blind because of delayed hospital admissions are entirely without documentation.

The minister said he reviewed case files and found all major decisions about the patient's surgery were made by North himself. Royal Jubilee Hospital, where the booking was made, acted properly, he added.

North charged last week that the patient's eyesight could have been saved if he hadn't had to wait six months for surgery.

Mair suggested the College of Physicians and Surgeons, responsible for standards of medical practice in B.C., might be interested in the files.

Ferry rates up, Bennett hints

The cabinet will be very tough on any request for an excessive increase in ferry rates, Premier Bill Bennett said today.

But almost in the same breath he hinted that a hike may be inevitable.

The premier cited the soaring cost of fuel as a reason why the government might have to consider higher rates.

A request from the B.C. Ferry Corporation is expected to go to cabinet before the end of the month.

B.C. Ferries general manager Charles Gallagher has suggested an increase of $2 or $3 in the basic $9 rate for transporting vehicles one-way on the main routes between Vancouver Island and the Mainland.

Passenger fares would remain unchanged.

The proposed increases as percentages are 22.2 per cent or 33.3 per cent.

Bennett refused to say whether he considers this proposal "excessive."

The premier said more than a year ago that with the provincial subsidy to the Ferry Corporation indexed to the cost of living, no fare increases would be necessary.

He said today the subsidy should total more than $60 million this year but a fare increase may still be needed to deal with the rising cost of fuel and wages.

S. Africa warns Rhodesia

Reuters

Black African countries expressed delight today at Black nationalist leader Robert Mugabe's landslide victory in the Rhodesian elections, but the result drew a warning for the future from white-ruled South Africa.

South African Prime Minister Pieter Botha said in a statement: "The result is a decision by the people of Rhodesia. They will have to work it out for themselves and live with it."

Botha added the warning that any neighbor which allows its territory to be used for attacks on South Africa will "have to face all the force of the republic's strength."

In Salisbury, Mugabe announced he was forming a new government including his chief guerrilla rival and the country's minority whites.

"This is a great moment," Mugabe, 55, told reporters after he was asked by Britain's interim governor, Lord Soames, to become prime minister and name a government to lead the country to legal independence.

Tens of thousands of people rushed into the streets when Mugabe's victory was announced, cheering, waving branches, dancing and waving posters reading "Forward with the revolution."

Army helicopter gunships roared low over the black townships of Salisbury in an effort to keep the jubilant mood from spilling over into the predominantly white downtown district and possible violence.

Thousands of white army troops in battle dress and equipped with armored cars and artillery rushed to the edges of the black areas of the city to contain the celebrations.

In a nationwide radio and television broadcast, Rhodesian Registrar General Eric Pope-Simmonds announced that in last week's general election, Mugabe had captured 1,668,992 votes, or 62.9 per cent of the ballots counted, giving him

Mails kill February 29 puzzle

The Payoff Puzzle which was to have been published in last Friday's Times has finally arrived but unfortunately too late to use.

The puzzle was postmarked in New York Feb. 20 and arrived at our office today, just short of two weeks in Her Majesty's and the U.S. mails.

While the contest for last week is off, the $50 weekly prize money will be added to the next contest.

Artist makes his mark undercover, on tiptoe

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — "We call him Leonardo da Toenail," said Sgt. George Farina of the University of Southern California's campus police.

Farina was referring to a man who reportedly has a penchant for crawling underneath library tables and painting the exposed toenails of unsuspecting coeds at USC.

The Case of the Phantom Pedicurist first broke when one of the alleged victims noticed she had a fresh coat of polish on her toenails after leaving Doheny Library, Farina said.

The nails had been pink when she walked in; green when she walked out.

"Maybe she thought it was a fraternity prank at first," Farina said of the unidentified coed. "But she found another woman in her apartment who had had the same experience and they decided to contact authorities."

Campus police quickly found a man in his mid-20s — neither a student nor a library employee — who was carrying a bag with about 15 bottles of fingernail polish inside.

However, painting someone's toenails without permission is only a misdemeanor. And since officers must witness a misdemeanor to make an arrest, the man was set free.

Talk about beating the bushes for votes!

Socred MLA George Mussallem says the Sasquatch should be given total protection — he may turn out to be a voter — even a Socred voter.

Two years ago, the member from Dewdney proposed a private member's bill designed to protect the elusive creature.

In an interview today, he said if it becomes necessary he'll bring his legislation in again.

Mussallem said Sasquatches are certain to be free enterprisers and therefore Social Credit supporters.

In fact, says Mussallem, he wouldn't be surprised to see one elected to the Legislature.

"I think you would find one taking a prominent place in our party."

With a straight face, he added, "The Rhinoceros Party is a joke. This is no joke."

U.S. loan rate pierces 17%

NEW YORK (UPI) — Chase Manhattan Bank, the United States' third biggest, today announced a half-point leap in its prime loan rate to 17¼ per cent, the first bank to pierce the 17 per cent plateau.

The Chase move was followed shortly by ninth-ranked First National Bank of Chicago.

The bank rate boost sent stock prices plunging in fairly active trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 8.79 points Monday, was off 5.46 points at noon today EST.

Many money market watchers have predicted the prime rate will rise to 18 per cent in the near future as the Fed desparately attempts to combat inflation.

The rate of return on 13-week Treasury bills soared to a record 15.13 per cent late Monday. Because of this hike, brokers said many traders are leaving the stock market because they can get more from the money instruments.

Although the key interest rate charged on loans to a bank's most creditworthy customers has been expected to increase shortly above the record 16 ¾ per cent reached Friday, Chase's move was an immediate reaction to reported credit-tightening Monday by the Federal Reserve.

Big borrowers are most directly affected by prime rate hikes but since the prime also serves as a barometer for all interest rates, consumers will pay more for loans — if they can find them — as a result of the latest increase.

Apr. 14 sitting

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced today that the 32nd Parliament will sit April 14.

Pub patrons pine for Polly

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Polly the parrot, an ornery, bad-tempered bird who was the official mascot of a bar in this rough-and-ready mill town, has been birdnapped.

The captors crept into the hotel lobby home of the Amazon parrot in the middle of the night, snatched their victim and flew the coop 11 days ago.

Now the staff and hard-drinking patrons of Polly's Pub, named after the bird, fear the worst, especially as the feathered barfly needs special medication to ward off the effects of the damp, sulphurous air of this Vancouver Island pulp mill community.

There has been no ransom note from the kidnappers and no leads to the whereabouts of Polly, so named despite his sex.

A local resident said to have the powers of extra-sensory perception gazed meaningfully at a photograph of the parrot, but could only elicit the information that he was still alive.

"Everyone has been asking about the bird," Ron Parker, manager of the inn where Polly has made his home since October, 1978, said Monday. "There have been no results yet.

"I knew this would happen sooner or later in this town," said Parker, in his grief at the loss. "They have a mentality here that this kind of thing is a challenge."

Parker said the bird, which occasionally looked bedraggled, had recently been taking medication to keep it healthy. The kidnappers might not have taken Polly if they had realized the state of his health, he said.

A $150 reward has been offered for the parrot's return. The bird, about 2½ to 3 years old, is valued at about $1,000.

The bird was loved despite of, or perhaps because of, a foul temper, said Parker. People who thought that Polly's jolly plumage reflected his nature were often surprised when they extended a finger through the bars of his cage to pet him. Polly was as adept at crunching fingers as sunflower seeds.

Parker suspects one motive of the kidnappers could be revenge.

"He broke dozens of watches," on unwelcome wrists extended into his cage, said Parker. "He pulled out buttons on shirts, he would refuse to go back into his cage.

Lalonde waffles on oil price

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Marc Lalonde said today he makes no guarantees that oil prices won't rise as much as $4.50 a barrel in each of the next three years, the amount projected by the former Progressive Conservative government.

Lalonde said the new Liberal government is pledged only to keep price increases this year below the $4 a barrel planned by the former Joe Clark government and had made no pledge for following years.

Lalonde's remarks appeared to directly contradict the impression left by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau during the campaign that energy price increases in each of the next four years would be kept below the amounts planned by the Conservatives.

"We've said nothing during the campaign about this," Lalonde told reporters at the end of the first meeting of the Liberal cabinet sworn in Monday.

Oil pricing was a major issue during the campaign and Trudeau continually attacked proposals by the Clark government to raise prices by $4 a barrel this year and by $4.50 a barrel in each of the following three years.

The Alberta government, meanwhile, has reacted cautiously to the appointment of Lalonde to energy, with some officials privately expressing reservations. Premier Peter Lougheed had said after the election that he would not accept an oil price that would give Alberta fewer benefits than the pact he was negotiating with the Tory government.

Lalonde said Monday a variety of possibilities will be explored in the coming weeks to keep the increases down and still give provinces such as Alberta the additional revenue they are demanding.

"All negotiations with Alberta are starting from scratch now. I haven't seen any deals that were signed by the Conservative government. This is a new ball game."

Alberta Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Dick Johnston said the appointment of Lalonde as energy minister indicates the Trudeau government will give the coming oil-pricing talks a high priority. But other government sources were less optimistic.

The sources said Lalonde's strong criticism of the oil pricing deal almost worked out with the previous Progressive Conservative government of Joe Clark won him no friends in either the provincial government or the oil industry.

Industry spokesmen also were skeptical of Lalonde for his attack on National Energy Board approval in December of a 3.75-trillion-cubic-foot increase in natural gas exports to the United States. Lalonde called the sale, worth about $15 billion to Canada over the next seven years, a sell-out.

Meanwhile, Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney said Monday he is concerned about the appointment of Jean Luc Pepin as transport minister.

Blakeney said Pepin is a strong and senior minister but is not as familiar with the feelings of Atlantic Canada or the Prairies as a person from those regions would be.

Finance Minister Allan MacEachen said today he hopes to bring in his first budget before summer.

"I haven't determined a date, but my general guide is to do it as soon as possible," MacEachen told reporters as he headed into the first meeting of the new Liberal cabinet.

He doubted he could produce a budget within two months, but hoped it would be before summer.

Ottawa sells gold

OTTAWA (CP) — The government sold more gold last month, bringing down the book value of its gold reservesto $995.6 million from $1.009 billion in January, the finance department said today.

The sale involved 107,000 ounces of gold at an average price of $680 an ounce. In January, the government sold 252,000 ounces at an average of $690.

As a result of the February sales, gold holdings stood at 21.82 million ounces. The sale was the second of a previously-announced plan to reduce the high proportion of gold in the official reserves.

In its monthly statement of official reserves, the department said that reserves of foreign currency at the end of February stood at $4.46 billion.

Downhill winner

LAKE LOUISE, Alta. (CP) — Herbert Plank of Italy won the final World Cup downhill ski race of the season Tuesday and Peter Mueller of Switzerland retained his over-all downhill championship despite finishing out of the top 10.

Ken Read of Calgary, who had to finish no worse than third to have a chance at winning the downhill crown, finished seventh.

Unofficial results showed Plank with a winning time of one minute 50.47 seconds. Harti Weirather of Austria was second in 1:51.24 and Werner Grissmann of Austria was third in 1:51.47.

Standoff over roe

A standoff over roe herring prices continued today between fishing companies and two groups representing about 30 per cent of the fishing fleet.

No further meetings are scheduled between the Fisheries Association of B.C. and representatives of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood of B.C.

Meanwhile, about 175 gillnetters are fishing in two areas on the west Coast of Vancouver Island which have been opened by the federal fisheries department.

A fisheries spokesman said about 180 or 190 vessels are on the scene at Esperanza Inlet and 140 of them are fishing. Until 10 p.m. Monday night, 760 tons had been taken.

Another 35 punts are fishing at Quatsino Sound.

One company is reported paying fishermen $500 a ton for the herring but the majority of co-operatives and independent buyers are giving a $200 down payment with the final price to be determined at the end of the season.

Members of the UFAWU and native brotherhood have voted 90.25 per cent not to fish for the prices offered by the fisheries association — $640 a ton for gillnet-caught herring and $325 a ton for seine-caught.

The union wants $1,400 a ton for gillnet-caught and $850 a ton for seiner-caught herring.

A union spokesman's only comment today was "no comment, nothing is going on."

There is a union membership meeting scheduled for Wednesday and Jerry Spitz, fisheries association president, said he hopes something will come of that.

"It is almost to the point where we can forget it," Spitz said.

"Another couple of days and it will be all over."

Spitz said he is bothered by the fact that the union and brotherhood, which only represent 30 per cent of the 1,550 herring licences, are holding back the fishery.

"The other 70 per cent of the fishermen don't seem to have any rights of their own."

The fish companies' position is that they can't afford to pay any more for the herring because they need to rebuild a market in Japan depressed by consumer boycotts.

The Japanese stopped buying the roe when the price went as high as $45 a pound, due in part to prices which averaged $3,200 a ton during last season's fishery.

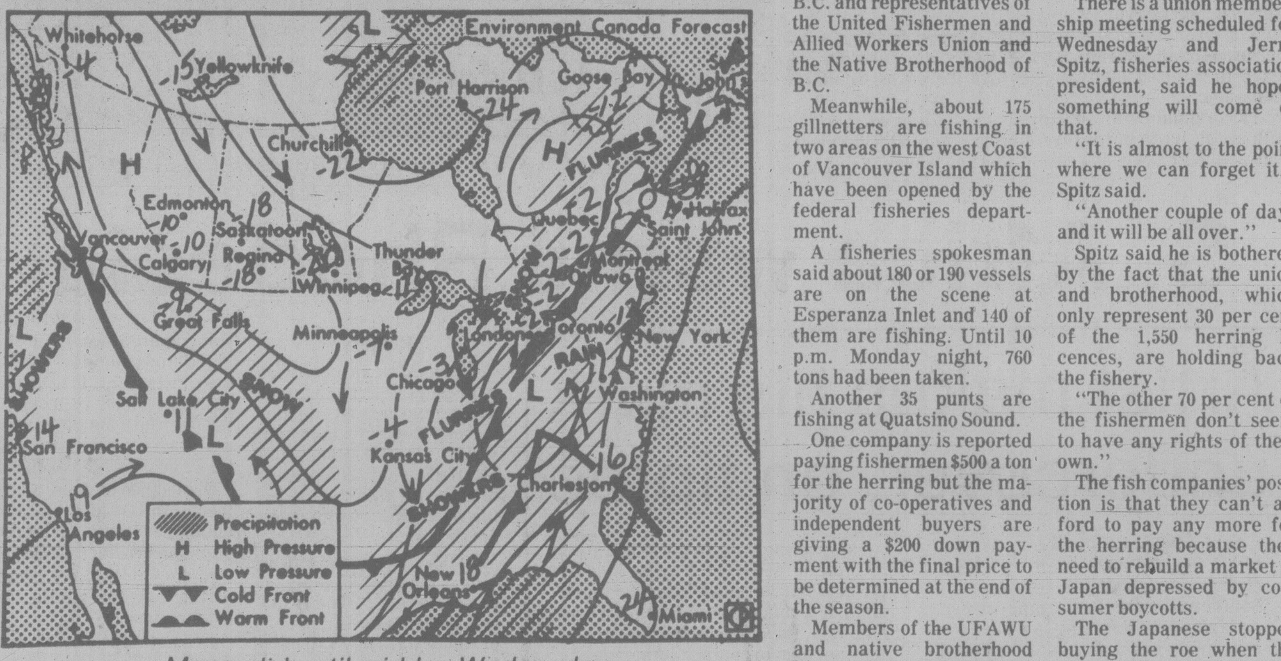

Map valid until midday Wednesday

Cold air moved slowly south into the interior overnight bringing temperatures near minus 20 to the central region under clear skies. Some rain was falling over the south coast with cloudy skies extending across the southern interior. The clouds will gradually move south out of the province today as a high pressure area drops southeast into southern Alberta. A low pressure area moving southeast towards the Oregon coast poses a slight threat to the southern regions on Wednesday. Present indications are that the cloud and any precipitation associated with the system will remain south of our regions.

Italian bankers seized in swoop

ROME (AP) — Striking in early-morning raids in fashionable neighborhoods throughout Italy, police arrested 38 bank presidents and other prominent businessmen today on charges involving an alleged country-wide loan scandal.

Police and court sources said many of the bankers were surprised in their homes as early as 6 a.m. and taken to jail.

The arrests were ordered by Rome Investigating Judge Antonio Alibrandi, who issued 49 warrants for embezzlement and related charges. It was not immediately clear when the remaining 11 arrests would be made.

Among the accused are top executives or former officials of a large number of savings banks, including those in Milan, Florence, Genoa, Bologna and Palermo. Fifteen warrants were issued for industrialists, construction company executives and professional men who were said to have benefitted from the loans.

The case is the second major scandal involving Italy's savings banks in recent years. Previously, top executives of the central savings institute Italcasse were convicted of using bank funds to make illegal contributions to political parties.

Money Talk

A series in which Montreal Trust answers your questions.

"Why should I have to pay to write cheques?"

"In my opinion, the entire system of paying for cheques is wrong. After all, financial institutions get free use of money deposited in chequing accounts, without paying any (or very little) interest in return. The least they can do is give free chequing. I'd be interested to hear your comments on this matter."

This is a topic that seems to arouse a good deal of controversy and has been championed at various times by many of the popular consumerist movements both here in Canada and abroad.

Despite this, many institutions do continue to charge up to 20¢ for cheques.

At Montreal Trust, we have a Personal Chequing Account that offers unlimited free chequing. It's a feature that has, since it's inauguration, become very popular.

In answer, therefore, may we suggest that if paying for cheques angers you, you do have an alternative!

Convenience of making deposits by mail.

"I have a Montreal Trust Plus Savings Account into which I make deposits fairly regularly. Unfortunately, I can't always make it to your offices. Could I therefore arrange to do this by mail?"

Not only is this possible, but we've actually made it very easy.

What happens is that we supply you with a complete mailing kit, which consists of a deposit-by-mail form and a pre-addressed, pre-paid envelope. Each kit is replaced when we receive your deposit and, if you enclose your passbook, we can update it at the same time. Otherwise, we'll update it next time you come in.

If any of our customers have any suggestions as to how we can make our procedures simpler or more convenient, we'll be glad to hear from you.

A recycled cabinet to greet the '80s

OTTAWA — When Pierre Trudeau parted the snows of Rideau Hall in a wine-colored limousine Monday afternoon, he bounded out of the car with his old trademark of a red rose in his lapel.

The brief sign of passion quickly died once he unveiled his cabinet a few minutes later before a stiff-from-surgery Governor-General Ed Schreyer.

The man who conducted a desultory, limpid campaign to win last month showed that his mood continues: it is game as usual and the team that lost the election of 1979 is to press on basically intact.

Lalonde, MacEachen, Chretien, Munro, Whelan, Ouellet — Mr. Trudeau, for all his personal dash, has never been very daring in his appointments and there are still, in 1980, remnants of a Pearson cabinet in his latest recycling of basically the same group of professional cabinet minisers, career Ottawa politicians.

Just as Joe Clark's new cabinet last spring seemed to be more promising than the spent Liberal cabinet it defeated, this new Gang of 32 doesn't seem as good as the Clark cabinet that came tumbling down through naivete.

The striking ladies from Bell Canada in their snowsuits picketed the gates of Government House and yelped at the shiny new cabinet ministers and wives as they drove off and if one didn't know better you'd have thought they were making a critical comment on Trudeau's remarkable lack of imagination in this, his final attempt at the vindication of history.

As one sample of the languid Trudeau approach to a new decade, one-third of his 18 veterans were given the same posts they'd held previously.

Eugene Whelan, Andre Ouellet, Dan MacDonald, Ray Perrault, Romeo LeBlanc, Monique Begin — all go back to where they once came from. The inference is clear. The Liberal defeat in May of 1979 was just an aberration, an interruption in power, and ho-hum, we pick up the boring pieces.

It is Mr. Trudeau's lumpish imagination in solving his supposed crisis with the West that is most phenomenal.

To represent Saskatchewan, he has chosen Senator Hazen Argue, an old CCF-er who, in a fit of pique at losing the leadership of the NDP to Tommy Douglas, allowed himself to be purchased by the Liberals and was given his Senate reward. It occasioned the famous Commons speech by David Lewis in which he said Judas Iscariot's price was 30 prices of silver but Hazen Argue's price was higher, being the Senate salary he would receive from age 45 until the compulsory retirement age of 75. Mr. Argue has now received a raise.

To represent Alberta, the PM has chosen Senator Bud Olson, a Social Crediter before he, too, switched to the Liberals and, of course, was given his Senate award when needed.

To represent B.C., the PM has chosen Senator Ray Perrault, fondly known as Senator Phogbound in his home province, a man whose enthusiasm overmatches his talent and who has devoted his life to the Liberal Party for 30 years.

If this is the way Mr. Trudeau is to win the West, you can hear the giggles all the way from Portage la Prairie to Sooke.

The only minister from the West who represents anyone, Lloyd Axworthy, was strangely given employment and immigration — not in his realm of expertise.

A new decade? A new Liberal era? With Jeanne Sauve elevated to Speaker, there are only two women in this brave new Trudeau world and one of them, a personable and bright new MP from Nickel Belt, Judy Erola, was rewarded for her background in broadcasting and theatre by being made minister of state for mines.

The strange Trudeau aversion to innovation? Three of his faithful who had been in trouble with either the law or ethics were brought back.

Francis Fox, kept well away from legal or economic posts, was given the arts and communications, John Munro, who insisted on phoning a judge despite dire warnings, was sent north.

And, almost in an act of defiance, Andre Ouellet, who was convicted of contempt of court for previous comments about a judge while minister of consumer and corporate affairs, was presented with that portfolio once again.

In the most astounding decision, the bookish Mark MacGuigan of Windsor, who inexplicably had been kept out of all other Trudeau cabinets, was suddenly thrust into one of the biggest of all, external affairs. There is not a single phase in the experience of MacGuigan, an expert on the constitution, that goes beyond the borders of Canada.

Pierre Trudeau is now the oldest political leader in Canada and this cabinet reflects it — old not in age but in concept and ideas.

In the first volume of his memoirs, Henry Kissinger says that when a leader is first elected, his intellectual capital is at its peak and begins to run out from that moment on.

"Welcome to the 1980s", Trudeau said the night of Feb. 18 in the Chateau Laurier ballroom as he accepted victory.

But the intellectual capital which appeared to have been dissipated so severly in the election campaign seems — by this cabinet selection — to have run out.

Lawyer loses suite deal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Recording artist Terry Jacks was awarded $142,474 in B.C. Supreme Court Monday against a lawyer who failed to advise him of a $65,000 profit in an apartment deal.

Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson found that lawyer Andrew Reed Davis failed to divulge vital information to his client about the profit and that Jacks would not have purchased the apartment if he had known the true facts.

Justice Anderson said that what happened here was that a young lawyer with little experience, faced with an ethical dilemma, failed to come to grips with the problem that faced him.

"It is obvious that the law cannot countenance any breach of trust by a lawyer," said Justice Anderson.

He said all practising lawyers must know they must act with the utmost good faith toward their clients.

"There are no exceptions to this equitable rule," he said. "The lawyer fails in his duty if he fails to make disclosure of all relevant facts to his client."

Jacks, bought the apartment in 1976 on the advice of William Abbott, who was friend and financial adviser. Unknown to Jacks, Abbott was a shareholder in Blunden Developments Ltd., which had arranged to purchase the apartment for $845,304 while the selling price to Jacks was $910,600.

Jacks said he would not have purchased the apartment if he had known that Abbott stood to make a large profit from the transaction.

Justice Anderson said that not only did Davis fail to disclose the profit but the closing documents gave no intimation of an intermediate purchase by anyone.

However, Justice Anderson said the apartment purchase took place in April, 1976, and no explanation was given why Jacks did not sell the apartment at the end of that year when he discovered the vacancy situation was bad and he was losing money on the deal.

Heart attack kills a Beachcomber

. . . end of the role

GIBSONS (CP) — Veteran character actor Reg Romero, featured in the CBC television series The Beachcombers, has died of a heart attack.

Romero, 59, of White Rock, was on set filming the series' first episode for the 1980-81 season when he suffered the heart attack Sunday. He died on the way to hospital.

For the last six years, Romero portrayed the bumbling Irishman McLoskey acting as a likeable foil for Robert Clothier's irascible Relic.

The part of McLoskey, originally an occasional character, soon developed into a continuing role.

Born in Wales, Romero started his acting career in England with repertory theatre groups and played in London's West End before coming to Canada.

He also worked with Vancouver theatre companies and taught acting.

There will be no funeral service. The body will be cremated here later this week.

McKitka world 'worst'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The worst of all possible worlds existed in Surrey during the term of former mayor Ed McKitka, now on trial for nine criminal charges relating to misuse of his elected office, Crown counsel John Hall told B.C. Supreme Court Monday.

Hall attacked the credibility of testimony given earlier in the New Westminster court by McKitka, who is alleged to have committed a breach of trust by passing confidential information to a developer.

But defence lawyer H. A. D. Oliver likened the Crown's case, which relied on 36 telephone calls and conversations secretly bugged in 1977, to a 1,000-piece jigsaw puzzle which missed many sections. On the basis of only 30 or 40 pieces, the Crown expects the jury to visualize the whole picture, he said.

"I say that is not what the picture shows and that is not where the pieces fit," Oliver said. "The interesting thing is this is a jigsaw puzzle were the Crown has all the other pieces in its box but they put out 30 or 40."

The Prosecutor said the municipal staff withheld planning information from property owners while McKitka fed information to developer Walter Link.

Both lawyers dealt with opposing versions of one charge heard during the trial. Former Social Credit MLA Ray Loewen accused McKitka of seeking a $100,000 bribe from him but McKitka responded by calling Loewen a liar.

Hall argued that Loewen's account "had a ring of truth" and his credibility was not shaken by cross examination.

"McKitka does not compare favorable in that regard with Loewen," Hall said.

The same old team

It is almost as if the past nine months never were.

The swearing into office of the new Liberal cabinet yesterday demonstrated that Prime Minister Trudeau has convinced himself that Canadians dearly want the return of a Liberal cabinet that is as close a replica as possible of the one they threw out last May.

The "new Liberal team," so heralded during the election campaign, has, with a couple of notable exceptions, proved to be a team relegated to playing in the most junior leagues. Although 14 of the 33 ministers have not sat in previous Liberal cabinets, most of the newcomers have been put into the lowliest possible positions in the cabinet: public works, national revenue and a series of minister of state portfolios that amount to little more than assistants to senior ministers.

Virtually all the major decision-making portfolios — and most of the middle level ones too — have returned to the same old faces, juggled only a little: Allan MacEachen, Jean Chretien, Marc Lalonde, Jean-Luc Pepin, Monique Begin, Daniel MacDonald (not to be confused with Donald MacDonald who didn't run this time around), Jean-Jacques Blais, Gilles Lamontagne, John Roberts, Romeo Leblanc.

Added to the list are three former ministers who had to resign at one time or another for indiscretions and inappropriate behavior: John Munro (an inappropriate telephone call to a judge), Andre Oullette (a conviction for contempt of court as the result of questioning a judge's sanity), and Francix Fox (a forged signature on the abortion application of a lover). Apparently Trudeau considers nine months in opposition is sufficient penalty for any Liberal.

The prime minister's efforts to provide western representation in his cabinet are little more encouraging. Lloyd Axworthy, one of the two Winnipeg Liberal MPs elected, will probably do a good job in the middle-level post of immigration and employment.

The three senators named to the cabinet, however, are true ghosts from the past and, in two cases out of the three, a tribute to the merits of changing parties. Ray Perrault, B.C. provincial Liberal leader in the mid-1960s, returns to his old job of Government Leader in the Senate. That is expected to take care of B.C.

Alberta will be represented by Bud Olson, a former Social Crediter, who served as agriculture minister in the Trudeau government from 1968 to 1972. He will have the ill-defined job of economic development minister.

For Saskatchewan, Trudeau has dug even further back — to Hazen Argue, a former CCFer who was defeated when he switched to the Liberals before the 1963 federal election.

The thought of these three representing the needs of the West in the 1980s seems incongruous.

To be fair, there are a couple of bright spots in the cabinet list. Mark MacGuigan, a well-respected backbencher, is a fresh face in the high-profile job of external affairs minister. In the past, however, external affairs has been Trudeau's personal strong point, and he has been the prime mover of most Canadian foreign policy. It remains to be seen just how much influence MacGuigan will have.

Three other newcomers who should show promise in middle-level jobs are Bob Kaplan (solicitor-general), Don Johnston (treasury board), and Gerald Regan (labor). And Herb Gray may bring a fresh approach to the industry, trade and commerce ministry with his personal philosophy of economic nationalism.

Over-all, however, it does not seem the Liberal team has changed enough to give much reason for optimism to those deeply discouraged with its performance in the late 1970s. It is only to be hoped that the same players will at least be playing a different game.

Judicial independence

Mr. Justice Peter Seaton said in his recently released report on judicial independence that no censure or disciplinary action should be taken against deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel for his "inappropriate" communications with a judge of the Provincial Court.

Mr. Justice Seaton heard the evidence and read the transcripts concerning those communications. His judgment must be respected.

But the public should be deeply concerned, not so much by the details of the individual case involved as by the general attitude displayed by Vogel towards the important constitutional principle of judicial independence.

Giving evidence before Mr. Justice Seaton, Vogel said of his relationship with the chief judges of B.C. courts: "None of us have devoted any of our time to drawing the line; all of us work with a view to solving whatever problem it was that brought us together . . . the judicial side and the executive side reacting together in this teamwork atmosphere . . ."

As Mr. Justice Seaton said, most clearly and appropriately: "Judges are not part of a government team. Their function is separate and distinct. Not infrequently they decide between government and individuals, and they must not be associated with either. . ."

Later in his report, he wrote again: "The teamwork concept that has judges assisting the executive is a dangerous concept. . . The judge's place is in the middle, as independent from one side as from the other. Some co-operation is essential. Many communications between the ministry and the judge are unavoidable, but it must always be kept in mind that the judge has separate responsibilities."

The principle of judicial independence is fundamental to our system of democracy. The existence of a truly independent arbiter, as willing and able to rule against the government as against any individual if that is what the law requires, is as important a part of the system as is the secret ballot or freedom of expression.

It is alarming that the deputy attorney-general, the senior civil servant in charge of the justice system, could even mention the idea of teamwork between judges and the executive branch.

Changes in attitude are badly needed.

RICHARD GWYN

Big cars are stiil beautiful

OTTAWA — Recently, some Canadian Volkswagen dealers have noticed something most peculiar: Among their customers have been a number of U.S. dealers who have bought diesel Rabbits at retail prices and who then have driven these across the border to sell to their own customers.

Other Canadian dealers have noticed a phenomenon that's as peculiar, but quite different. Suddenly, manufacturers are offering them large cars at large discounts. Ford LTDs and Thunderbirds bound for Alberta are a handy example.

The same story is repeated in the statistics. Although we like to think Americans as hurtling about in air-conditioned Cadillacs while we tool along conscientiously in compacts, large cars sales (intermediates and standards) accounted for only 30 per cent of new sales in the U.S. last year, compared to close to 50 per cent here.

Small car demand

There, small has become beautiful: Hence the demand for Rabbits. Here, we still believe in the bigger the better; hence the demand for LTDs and Thunderbirds.

To figure out what's going on, all you need to do is to take a spin across the border and to buy, on each side, a gallon of the same kind of gasoline from the same kind of service station.

Assuming that afterwards you punch the right buttons on your pocket calculator, here's what you would find: Canada, $1.10 a gallon; the U.S., $1.50.

In a year's time, if you sortied out to make the same comparison shopping, here's what you'd find then: Canada, about $1.25; the U.S. $2.00.

In the election just (thankfully) ended, Pierre Trudeau convinced us that an 18 cents a gallon excise tax would be bad for us, much as in the 1974 election when he convinced us that wage and price controls would be bad for us. Both times he won. Both times, we, and he, had to then, and have to now, pick up the pieces.

The piece that Trudeau has to pick up now is about $2.5 billion worth of revenues lost by the abolition of the gasoline excise tax. Instead of paying more at the pump, we'll have to pay more in general taxes, although somehow Trudeau didn't get around to mentioning this during the campaign.

The piece left for all of us to pick up is the entire idea of using higher prices to force ourselves to conserve energy.

We are marching now to a different drummer from the rest of the industrialized West. In the U.S., oil prices will rise to world levels by the end of '81. In Europe, gasoline already costs $3-4 a gallon.

Indeed, we aren't so much marching differently as drumming differently — on the top of our heads. By the way we voted in the election, we have voted not just for low oil prices but for subsidized oil prices, that is for a policy of actually subsidizing consumers to consume all the oil and gasoline they want.

At a minimum, this subsidy amounts to $3.5 billion a year, or the sum needed now to reduce world-price oil imported into the five eastern provinces to the level of our domestic price. At a maximum, it is about $10 billion a year, or to the difference between our $15 a barrel domestic oil price and the $30 a barrel world price, multiplied by all the barrels of oil we consume.

As you'd expect, opinions about the effect of price upon consumption differ from expert to expert, and from month to month. Last November, the energy department declared that, "Higher prices act as a strong incentive to conserve energy." This month, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) concluded that in Canada and the U.S., consumption of gasoline is "irresponsive to price."

To know who's right is difficult, chiefly because we've never put the theory to the test. Back in 1971, in those carefree days before the Arabs figured out how to run a cartel, gasoline cost 51 cents a gallon. Today's price seems higher, but in terms of inflation-shrunk 1971 dollars it is virtually unchanged, at 52.1 cents a gallon. So much for all the rhetoric about restraint, belt-tightening and glaring grim-faced into the future.

The experts do agree, though, that if price doesn't change, neither will patterns of consumption.

Testcase

Here, Canada does serve as a testcase. We've done nothing (about price), so nothing has happened. In 1973, the first year of the energy crunch, 50 per cent of Canadians drove themselves to work, alone. In 1975, 52 per cent did. Then, 16 per cent used public transportation. Two years ago, 15 per cent did.

Our policy of doing nothing continues to produce results. In 1979, our gasoline prices declined in real terms; in lockstep, our consumption increased, by 4 per cent. By contrast, in the U.S., the cost of a gallon jumped by 50 cents; consumption dropped by 7 per cent, although most of this decline was caused by actual shortages at service stations.

By the election result, we've told our new government to go on doing nothing. (Trudeau's policy, of increasing the cost-per-gallon by "less than" 14 cents will, just about, keep the price constant relative to inflation.) The tune's a looney one, but we paid the piper to play it.

Re-direct anger

At last we have a sensible statement on the municipal level about the bus passes. Mayor Sealey puts the whole thing in perspective. Not content with unloading transit costs on the local taxpayer the Socreds now want to dump the cost of bus passes which are part of the Human Resources Ministry budget. To add insult to injury B.C. Hydro having been relieved of transit costs now plans to increase hydro rates with provincial government consent.

Mayor Sealey is right. Bus pass holders should stop wasting their time taking pot shots at the statements from the regional district's Mr. Campell and direct their concern as voters to Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy — John Wood, 1222 Tattersal Drive.

No depth

Having seen the efforts both behind the scenes and from the audience in the Belfry Theatre, I am simply horrified by the misplaced criticism of the Belfry Theatre management by the chairman and members of the Arts Sub-Committee.

The tremendous dedication and attention to detail by a tiny group, working to produce consistently first-class theatre deserves nothing but praise. They carry on, regardless of the difficulties working in an old, unheated building on an extremely small budget which only allows them to keep the building warm when the audience is present.

They should have all the support we can give them as should the Victoria Symphony Orchestra which has also achieved new and record levels of quality and support by the community.

Though no doubt dedicated, the Arts Sub-Committee can only lack knowledge in depth of what is really going on. — Margaret Wade, 1538 Beach Drive.

Lack of policy

The media has recently been giving a fair amount of publicity to a very serious insect infestation in the forest of the East Kootenays. This does not affect us down here on the coast except that it is within the grey stones of our parliament buildings that the counter attack and future preventative measures must originate. So far, the response is not encouraging.

If it were a forest fire, the waterbombers would be out and the press releases would provide maximum coverage of 'foresters on the battlelines'. But here is an insect infestation that is doing far more damage than the average fire, and the reaction in Victoria is mainly one of 'wait and see what industry can do about it.'

In trying to analyse why this sad lack of forestry initiative continues to prevail in our ministry of forests, one becomes quickly aware of the lack of forestry guidelines stating unequivocably how our forests are to be managed. Already, in the 1976 Report of the Royal Commission on Forestry, the "dismay at the lack of documented information on policy" is repeated over and over again. And today, that same situation prevails.

As a forester who served for over 18 years in the B.C. Forest Service, I recall the frustration at never being able to build-up a set of basic forestry rules that would prevail throughout the province. One needed only to attend a few forestry meetings to realize that there were as many forest management views on any one subject as there were foresters in the room. All were experts in their own field, all viewed the problem differently, all were right, but what was lacking was a step by step consensus on, the problem, the solution, and how this was to be achieved.

This situation is very evident today, and after 20 years absence from this province I was not astonished to find the muddled forest policy reflected throughout the Report of the Royal Commission. Nor am I astonished to find that the barkbeetle of the Kootenays is as active today at spitting sawdust in the eyes of puzzled foresters as it ever was. Only a permanent Forestry Commission, with the public well represented, can stop these forest chewers and other forest wasters from diddling us out of precious wood supplies. — D. M. Trew, 37-1240 Newport Avenue.

Reprehensible

The treatment reportedly meted out to our American visitors by a towing company is completely reprehensible. Under no circumstances should this kind of behavior be condoned.

I cannot see why any car bearing out-of-province licence plates is allowed to be towed away at all. Surely some form of polite notice pointing out the infraction would be sufficient and would most certainly leave a much better taste in the mouth of the car owner.

Most of these incidents are nothing more than unintentional and sometimes unavoidable minor infractions; yet anyone would think that these people were deliberate criminals. The case in question is particularly offensive as the car was not causing any bottle-neck to rush hour traffic, or posing any danger to anyone. — Brenda Goode, 4690 Cordova Bay Road.

Western voices

It is with concern and some amusement that I view Mr. Trudeau's dilemma over the fact of no representation from the West of Liberals for his cabinet. It appears he has not been listening enough in the past to our elected representatives from the West. Neither have the Tories for that matter, so there are a few more New Democrats from out our way on the opposition benches. That is his dilemma and not ours.

Our problem will be: Is he going to listen enough in the future?

On Feb. 18 we sent him a message. It seems it must be repeated again and again.

Instead of searching for new ways of finding representatives from the West for his cabinet who will rubber stamp his own policies, he should just listen very careflly to some of our new MPs on the other side of the House.

If he really has the desire for national unity he has talked about so constantly, he should just listen carefully in the coming months and carry out some of the policies suggested by the messengers we sent — new messengers carrying a knowledge of western needs that have been ignored too long. — Darwin Charlton, 3-1122 Collinson Street.

Identity at issue

R. A. McLeod's letter denouncing the French language and bilingualism was so biased and facile it cannot be allowed to pass without comment.

The one glimmer of insight occurs in the recognition that "French is lost in a sea of English speaking North Americans". This is precisely why Quebeckers are so vociferous in demanding preservation of their language, and their culture. At issue is Quebeckers' sense of self identity, in danger of extinction through innundation. Mr. McLeod does not bemoan the legal cultural recognition granted native Indians, nor the tweedy cultural baggage the Oak Bay crowd clings to.

It is especially absurd that the writer singles out the bilingual program as a tremendous cost for the benefit of a chosen few. Would he care to consider the profits oil companies rake off, replete with tax dodges, for shareholders, a fraction of whom are Canadians, or perhaps Mr. Lougheed's attempt to elevate Alberta's oil price demands into a quasi-cultural referendum? He would then see how hysterically misplaced his economic concerns are.

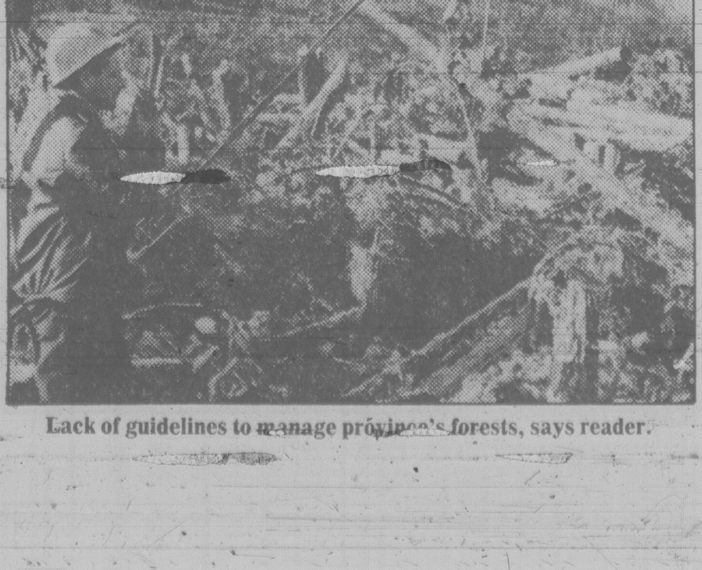
As for the percentage of native French speakers employed by the federal government, so what? As long as they are bilingual, shouldn't the only criterion for judgement be competence? Why not include statistical analysis of Jews, blacks, and women? Or would this be considered rednecked?

Finally, most Europeans are fluent in two languages — where English is a minority mother tongue — and many speak three languages. I never met anyone who felt this bilingualism was cause to complain. It seems that in the final analysis, those who rail against French language education have a vested interest in ignorance, both academically, and in a sense of nationhood. Is this, then, Mr. McLeod's perception of linguistic normalcy and unity? — Lari Mitchell, 9951 3rd Street, Sidney.

Reunion

Oshawa Collegiate and Vocational Institute in Oshawa, Ont. — now known as O'Neill Collegiate and Vocational Institute — is planning a giant reunion May 30 to June 1, 1980.

OCVI has seen close to 50,000 students go through its doors over the years, and we are hoping as many as 10,000 will attend this special reunion. If there are any former OCVI students — no, they don't have to be graduates — in your area, we would ask them to write immediately to: Reunion Committee, O'Neill Collegiate and Vocational Institute, 301 Simcoe St. N., about the reunion May 30 to June 1. — Stan Lovell and Bob Sheffield, Co-chairmen, OCVI Reunion Committee, Oshawa, Ontario.



Lack of guidelines to manage province's forests, says reader.

The young warriors of Belfast

By JANE O'HARA
FP News Service

'The best way to deal with a problem is stone it'

BELFAST — The human casualties of Ulster come in all shapes and sizes and none is more equal than another. Still, it is an odd quirk of human nature that allows us to think that the killing of a dozen soldiers is a news story, while the death of a single child is a tragedy.

Hughie Maguire was nine years old and like most Catholic kids on the Springfield Road, he was no angel. Hughie was killed last month while he and 20 friends were out stoning an army Saracen, an armored personnel carrier which can drive through a brick wall undamaged.

Stoning is common sport in Northern Ireland. You don't have to be a hooligan to qualify. But one wonders where a child as young as six gets the idea that bricking a taxi, or a tank, or anything that moves is a game not unlike tag or kick-the-can. Part of the answer comes from a Belfast mother of three.

"In Ulster there is so much rubble, so many buildings fallen down that for these kids picking up a brick and tossing it at a car is as natural as picking up a pebble on the beach and throwing it into the sea."

There are close to 340,000 school-age children in Ulster. They are a generation which, since 1969, when the troubles began, has known war as a way of life; and they have been hardened by it, warped by it. Although they watch the war from their living rooms, it is no television fantasy.

In their monkey-see, monkey-do fashion, they have learned the differences between a Catholic and a Protestant and the territorial boundaries which separate them. Prisoners of their own ghettos, they learn early that there is power in the strong arm and that the guy with the gun usually wins. After watching the army or the local Peelers (police) come into their homes and tear up their floor-boards, it doesn't take long to learn whom to hate.

They are a generation which has inherited the bigotry and suspicion of their parents. Yet, in their own time, they will be called on to solve the problems of the country and atone for the sins of their fathers. At present, their inheritance seems sparse: jobs are scarce, the economy is in a nosedive, their cities are falling down around them.

Having been taught that the best way to deal with a problem is to stone it, it is hard to imagine these children restoring pride to a nation and knitting up the social fabric. When a political settlement does comes about, as it undoubtedly will, will these children be better equipped than their parents to cohabit peacefully?

Miracles do happen. But after making a trip to the Divis complex, one of the many urban ghettos in Belfast, I'm not sure that even a visitation by the Prince of Peace Himself would make much difference.

The Divis is a grey and graffitied apartment block in the Catholic area of West Belfast. It houses approximately eight people per flat; it is constantly patrolled by the rifle-bearing military; inhabitants do not flinch at the sound of gunfire.

Since it fronts onto the Protestant war zone of the Shankhill, the Divis children do not dawdle on the way home from school and they do not go out at night. Since it stands in an area almost bereft of green grass, the idea of a proper playground is often as foreign as the notion of a father who works.

The children here play cheerfully on the long balconies which are their backyards. They bike and kick footballs and as kids do everywhere, inventive beings that they are, occasionally make up games. Games, for example, like kill-the-rat.

Kill-the-rat looks an interesting game, if you like rats. The rules are simple. There are no referees. The idea is to drop bits of bread or garbage from one balcony onto the balcony below. When the rat comes out to nibble, you then drop a brick on it. The kids obviously get a kick out of it.

"It's either that or nothin' sometimes," said one Divis mother, who lives with her four children in a two-bedroom flat. "I won't let them go out in the streets where they could get stoned themselves. There's nowhere else for them to go really."

The children of the Divis are not representative of all Ulster's children, but they do represent a special type of problem. Especially for the future of Northern Ireland.

A recent study by two educational psychologists into the behavior disorders of Ulster children offered little cause for optimism. It found that in 1977 alone, 267 kids under the age of 18 had been charged with serious terrorist offences. Fifty-three of them were between the ages of 14 and 16. It stated that truancy and vandalism were on the upswing and that close to 30 per cent of school children left the classroom without elementary subject skills.

In what was perhaps the most frightening finding, the report outlined the incidence of children who were "hopelessly alienated and being controlled by physical force."

Bob Neilly is 59, and for the past 33 years, he has had first-hand experience of what the academics claim in their report. He is the principal at Park Parade secondary school in one of the roughest areas of Protestant East Belfast. If the dead-end kids ever came back to further their education, they would no doubt end up at Park Parade.

"I've been at this school for more than three decades," said Neilly, a lovable hard-liner who has somehow managed a sense of humor over the years. "I've had murderers in my classes and attempted murderers. I've seen the Catholic community totally driven out of the neighborhood. It didn't take much. Just a few petrol bombs through the windows and they decided to leave.

"I know the problems that these kids have. I know where they live. I'm now teaching the children of a third-rate pug who is raising 16 kids in a four-room house with no hot water. When you know these things, its easier to understand why a kid is having trouble learning to read."

Sitting in his office, Neilly recites a litany of problems that beset the students of Park Parade. Some of them, such as vast unemployment, unfit parents, child battering and intolerable living conditions, are endemic to many Western societies. Admittedly, not to the same extent.

Other problems, such as the violent sectarian hatred, the suspicion of military and police authority, and the insidious influence of the paramilitary groups, are peculiar to Ulster. Since Park Parade falls in a rabidly pro-loyalist, Catholic-hating neck of Belfast, the students of Park Parade follow the territory's party line.

Kids are drafted early into such groups as the UDA (Ulster Defence Association), the UDF (Ulster Volunteer Force) in much the same way that Canadian kids would take up as cubs and scouts. To further the cause, they might be called on to hijack a car, or terrorize some Catholics, or assemble a gang of Orangies to fight a gang of Teagues. Petty crime, however, almost inevitably leads to more serious deeds.

The scary thing about the paramilitaries is that once you are in, it's almost impossible to get out. Intimidation tactics, such as knee-capping or a cement block on the head, are usually sufficient to deter defectors from the cause.

These people are not playing with pea-shooters.

"We know who the active terrorists are in the school," said Neilly. "We keep them separated from one another in classes. They only comprise about 5-10 per cent of the student body, but the remaining 90 per cent will follow the leaders when the signal is given.

"Part of the problem in stopping the violence and rooting out the troublemakers is the absolute hatred of police and army which is passed down from father to son. These youngsters are indoctrinated early on about what the police can ask and what they have to say. I watched a young chap just the other day, as bold as you like, tell an officer, 'My dad said never tell a Peeler anything.' "

There have been countless attempts to integrate Catholics and Protestants' to get them out of the ghettos and let them see that neither side has two heads. For example, there are inter-religious football leagues, and Catholic and Protestant day trips and excursions to foreign countries.

Neilly, who has led one such expedition himself, said: "The kids would get on great while they were out of their home environment. But the minute they stepped off the gangplank of the Channel steamer they were looking for the first brick."

Williams and Corrigan in closer times

Peace workers feud

By WILLIAM BORDERS
New York Times

The two Belfast women whose "Peace People" movement brought a surge of hope to Northern Ireland a few years ago have split up in an angry dispute over policy and personalities.

Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan, who shared the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977 for their campaign to halt the sectarian violence in the troubled province, said they would continue to work for peace along separate paths.

Their movement had been faltering recently, with the mass marches of 1976 now only a memory, and to some people this falling-out came as another symbol of the hopelessness of the Ulster problem.

Mrs. Williams, who abruptly quit the organization last month, walking out of a stormy committee meeting, says, "the movement had become too bureaucratic. It was suffocating in the offices, around committee tables. It needed to get back out to the streets, where the people are."

Miss Corrigan, who remains with the movement as its chairman, said only, "We are sorry to lose Betty Williams." But Ciaran McKeown, who was the third founder of the movement in 1976 and is now chairman of Peace People Limited, the company that administers the movement's substantial funds, said, "Betty's the one who needs to be closer to the people. She's been out of touch ever since winning the Nobel Prize, really."

In the opinion of many people in Northern Ireland, the organization began its decline at about the time that the two women won the Nobel Prize, attracting world attention to their simple protest movement against the violence between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

"The Nobel deflected them from their goal, and all the money didn't help much either," said a Belfast man who has followed the movement from its earliest days. In addition to the Nobel award of $140,000, the Peace People movement received many donations from abroad, including $340,000 raised in Norway.

The two women split the Nobel award, keeping the money for themselves, an action that attracted a good deal of criticism. The other money is still used to support the movement's activities.

Mrs. Williams and Miss Corrigan, both Catholics, started the movement in the summer of 1976 in shared horror at an accident in which three young children were killed in Belfast when they were run down by a car. The driver of the car, a guerrilla, had lost control of it after being shot by a British soldier.

After the deaths, the mother of the children, Anne Maguire, who was Miss Corrigan's sister, suffered from recurring mental depression. Last month, in a counterpoint to the troubles of the movement that her tragedy had inspired, she killed herself in her home in Belfast.

Hunters rewrite 'Bambi'

By THOMAS GRUBISICH
Washington Post

Millions of children have shed tears over Bambi's shooting, but now a group of Virginia hunters has managed to get federal money to teach children in the state that deer hunting is not a cause for crying. It is part of "fundamental wildlife management," the Virginians say.

Assured of at least $52,000 this year and the possibility of $1 million more over the next five years, the politically connected sportsmen have devised "Operation Respect," which will tell up to 140,000 Virginia school children that deer like "Bambi" of the Felix Salton story and Walt Disney movie sometimes have to be "harvested" for their own good.

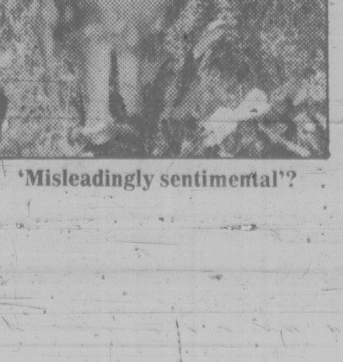
The sportsmen behind Operation Respect — an Acronym for "Responsible, Educated Sportsmen Promoting Ethical Conduct Together" — say the story of Bambi is not only misleadingly sentimental but just plain wrong in its depiction of the family life of deer.

"Deer don't group in families. Bucks are polygamous," complains John P. Randolph, an official of the Virginia Game Commisson, which will administer Operation Respect. Randolph says "Bambi" is a "classic example" of how a popular myth can damage wild life management techniques that keep deer alive.

"I think that's pretty sound thinking," agrees James Jones, a regional official of the U.S. Department of Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service, the federal agency that has agreed to fund the program. "I tend to go along with it. There's no question that the 'Bambi' story is a reflection of people's attitudes toward hunting."

To right these wrongs, Operation Respect plans a three-tiered, $1.6 million approach, starting with a one-hour program from elementary school children. That program will teach wildlife managment, including the need for thinning out animals considered to be over-populated. A basic gun safety course for students 12 years old and above and an advance course dealing in hunting techniques, trapping, archery and other subjects are also scheduled.

In Virginia, supporters of Operation Respect apparently see other desirable side effects. One is to counter the efforts of the anti-hunting faction, identified by Randolph as groups like Friends of Animals and Defenders of Wildlife.



'Misleadingly sentimental'?

"The antis make a lot of noise and their emotional arguments can be convincing to naive members of the public," an Operation Respect brochure says.

That statement infuriates some of the Virginia group's foes. "We are not anti-hunting," counters Tobby Cooper, program director for the Washignton-based Defenders of Wildlife. "We do a lot of things that hunters hate, like urging the closing of season on birds that are declining."

One way the Operation Respect program hopes to upgrade the hunter's image in Virginia is to insist on strict enforcement of the state's hunting laws, a job that game wardens cannot accomplish, according to a Respect brochure. "Only through peer pressure can we weed out the slobs," it says. "Reporting a hunting violation may be distasteful, but it is necessary."

The Interior Department's Jones said that federal officials like the Virginia program's "strong emphasis on hunter ethics. Hopefully it will produce better hunters in the field."

Virginia's Randolph defends the program's estimated $1.6 million budget, saying the funds will come from the federal government's excise taxes on handguns and archery equipment.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market dropped sharply in active mid-afternoon trading Tuesday.

Thirteen of the 14 stock groups in the composite index declined, led by real estate and construction. Only transporation advanced.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. was 10.21 million shares, compared with 11.71 million shares at the same time Monday.

Declines outnumbered advances 368 to 120 with 203 issues unchanged.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in shares of Brascan Ltd. and Western Mines Ltd. was halted at 2 p.m. pending an announcement. The stocks last traded at $27¾ and $22½ respectively.

Trading in shares of British Columbia Resources Investment Corp., which was halted at the opening, resumed and by 2 p.m. the stock was up ⅛ to $8¾.

The company announced that it has agreed in principle to buy the 13.4-per-cent interest in MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. held by Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd.

Trading in Kaiser Resources Ltd., which was also halted at the opening, resumed and by 2 p.m. the stock was down 2 to $36.

Kaiser said it raised the price of its pro rata tender offer to buy up to nine million of the company's 27,034,105 shares to $44 from $43.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, gaining .22 to $8.85 on 512,248 shares and Proflex Ltd. dropped .02 to .32 on 7,000. Taro Industries dropped ⅛ to $5¾ on 6,925 and Austin Investment Corp. remained unchanged at .51 on 3,000. Ardiem Industrial Corp. remained steady at .25 and Northway Gestalt remained unchanged at $2.00.

On the resource and development board, Liberty Petroleum dropped .15 to $5.10 on 502,700 shares and San Jacinto Explorations rose .02 to .63 on 195,900. Cherokee Development declined .15 to $1.30 on 67,150 and Landmark Resources remained unchanged at $1.16 on 57,500. Sipald Resources remained steady at $1.05 and Beach Gold Mines dropped .30 to $1.20.

New York

The New York stock market posted a broad loss Tuesday as hopes faded on Wall Street for any strong new government measures against inflation.

The market rallied late last week amid speculation that the Carter administration was planning some new anti-inflation actions, such as credit controls.

But as the weekend, and then Monday, passed without any announcement of such measures, selling pressure intensified in both the stock and bond markets.

Several large banks raised their prime lending rates Tuesday to a record of 17¼ ⅝ Wwzper cent.

Florida Power and Light led the active list, off 1⅛ to $20¼. A 1,473,000-share block traded at $20.

Squibb dropped 1¼ to $32¼ in trading marked by a 486,600-share block at $32.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was lower near the close of trading Tuesday.

The Financial Times index dropped 8.5 to 455.0.

Industrials and golds fell.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

Bonds

Monday

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian bond prices fell in sympathy with the market in the United States. Dealers said there was very little activity as participants attempted to place the balance of their Ontario Hydro bonds, which were brought to the market Friday.

The short end of the market fell 10 cents. Mid-, long-term, provincial and corporate issues dropped three-quarters.

The Canadian dollar continued its strength in foreign market Monday. This firmness, for the time being, should eliminate the necessity for increase in Canadian interest rates an analyst at Midland Doherty Ltd. said.

Day-to-day money was available at 13½ per cent.

Torstar

Torstar Corp., publisher of Toronto Star, had net income of $18.8 million or $2.31 a share last year on revenue of $371.1 million, an interim financial statement shows.

The company's last audited results were for 12 months ended Sept. 28, 1978, because of a change in its fiscal year. For that period earnings were $13.7 million or $1.69 a share on revenue of $277.4 million.

Int. Harvester

International Harvester Canada Ltd. of Hamilton says it is optimistic for the year ahead following record earnings and sales in 1979.

Net income rose to $73.95 million from $35.17 million in 1978, the company said in a statement. The 1979 earnings included deferred taxes of $16.45 million applicable to the British subsidiary Seddon Diesel Vehicles Ltd.

Sales increased to $1.43 billion from $1.01 billion in 1978. Canadian operations had net income of $40.69 million on sales of $1.21 billion, up from net income of $26.52 million on sales of $840.65 million.

Closing basic price of 1,000-ounce certificates in the Victoria area, according to the Scotiabank, $34.75 U.S. bid per troy ounce and $35.75 asked. Previous day $34.25 and $35.25.

company reports

Brenda Mines

Brenda Mines Ltd. has reported earnings of $25.9 million or $6.07 a share for 1979, compared with $13 million or $3.14 a share in 1978.

Revenue was $97.8 million compared with $73 million.

"The record earnings resulted from higher metal prices and the continuing weakness of the Canadian dollar," a company spokesman said.

"Copper and molybdenum output was 23 per cent less than in 1978, due to lower head grades and tonnage milled."

Weston Ltd.

George Weston Ltd. had net earnings of $65.9 million or $5.06 a share in 1979, compared with $50.6 or $4.06 a share the previous year.

The company said in an interim financial report that sales totalled $5.8 billion in 1979, compared with $5.2 billion.

The earnings figures do not include extraordinary items of $10.5 million in 1979 and $6.6 million the previous year. The report said continued improvements in profits will entail high levels of capital investment, but it gave no details.

Massey-Ferfuson

Massey-Ferguson Ltd. of Toronto has reported it lost money in the first quarter because of foreign exchange adjustments, despite an operating profit.

The company said in a statement its operating profit for the three months ended Jan. 31 was $18.7 million (U.S.) compared with $6.6 million in the same period the previous year.

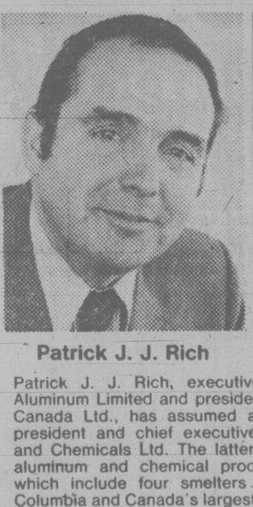
But foreign exchange losses were $31.3 million, a reversal of last year's gain of $16.9 million.

Massey-Ferguson said the loss resulted from strength of the British pound and the 30-per-cent devaluation of the Brazilian cruzeiro.

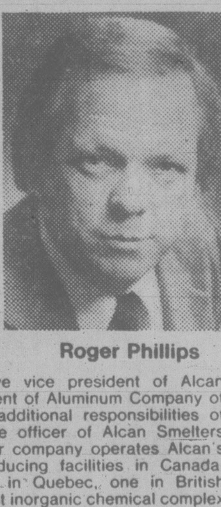
The net loss was $12.6 million or 80 cents a share compared with a profit of $23.5 million or $1.17 a share in the first quarter of the 1979 year.

Consolidated sales rose to $711 million from $568 million.

ALCAN APPOINTMENTS



Patrick J. J. Rich



Roger Phillips

Patrick J. J. Rich, executive vice president of Alcan Aluminum Limited and president of Aluminum Company of Canada Ltd., has assumed additional responsibilities of president and chief executive officer of Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. The latter company operates Alcan's aluminum and chemical producing facilities in Canada, which include four smelters in Quebec, one in British Columbia and Canada's largest inorganic chemical complex at Jonquiere, Quebec.

Roger Phillips, previously president of Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd., has been appointed vice president, Research, technology and engineering of Alcan Aluminum Limited and president of Alcan International Limited, the subsidiary responsible for those functions. Mr. Phillips succeeds M. G. O'Leary who will be retiring after 42 years' service with Alcan.

Messrs. Rich and Phillips will continue to be located at Alcan's international headquarters in Montreal.

Was dump-Maggie move to bag Queen of Surrey?

By JAKE BANKY

The man now pushing to save the Princess Marguerite was trying to sink the Maggie a short time ago.

Arthur Elworthy, head of the Crown-owned B.C. Steamship Co. which operates the Marguerite, has been making headlines by saying the old vessel should be put back on the Victoria-Seattle service this summer.

He calls her the best ship for the job.

But seven months ago, Elworthy was threatening to resign if the Marguerite was kept on the run for even one more season.

Minutes of a B.C. Steamship Co. board of directors meeting held last Aug. 2 contain the following statement:

"Mr. Elworthy advised the board that if the Princess Marguerite was to operate in 1980, then he would resign as an officer and director of the company."

At the time, Elworthy and the other directors were adamant that the Marguerite was unsafe and should not sail again.

One board member, Orval C. Cook, told the Aug. 2 meeting that even if no other ship were available, the Marguerite still should not be used again.

"We would just be throwing away the $1 million to $1.2 million we would spend as a stop-gap," he said.

Now, however, Elworthy is saying the Marguerite is perfectly safe and with a refit, could sail for several years more.

The Marguerite has Canadian Coast Guard and U.S. clearance and Lloyd's of London has issued her seaworthiness ticket, Elworthy said.

"She can go another year without any problem. She is in great shape."

Elworthy said the B.C. Steamship directors want to spend $1.4 million on refurbishing the elderly Princess.

"With the refit she would then be able to run for several more years."

He also claims the refit could be completed before the May 24 weekend, traditional start of the summer service to Seattle.

Observers suggest Elworthy maligned the Maggie last summer because he was certain he would get the palatial Queen of Surrey as a replacement.

But the Surrey was put on the mid-coast run instead and B.C. Steamship ended up with the smaller, slower, more awkward Queen of Prince Rupert.

So now he wants the Marguerite back.

Elworthy has challenged the provincial government to live up to its oft-repeated boast that it does not interfere with the independent boards of the Crown corporations.

If the government doesn't interfere the Marguerite will sail again, he said.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser laughed off that challenge.

"I can't keep up with all Elworthy's statements," he said Monday.

Fraser repeated his firm stand that the Rupert will replace the Marguerite.

Asked why he appeared to be interfering with a Crown corporation, contrary to stated policy, the minister replied, "Because the government owns all the assets of the corporation."

Fraser is expected to meet in the next few days with B.C. Steamships directors to discuss the controversy but he refused to comment on a report that he plans to fire Elworthy along with the other directors.

In the legislature, meanwhile, NDP transportation critic Don Lockstead called for an emergency debate on the government's decision to pull the Rupert off the mid-coast service and put it on a run it wasn't designed for.

This constitutes a social and economic threat to coastal communities, he said, including the real possibility of food shortages before the Queen of Surrey is ready to take over the service.

The motion was ruled out of order.

Park: garbage out, nature in

Take the garbage out, leave nature in.

That's the gist of an Oak Bay parks and recreation commission sub-committee report on Uplands Park.

Oak Bay council's works committee has asked its own administration to report on the sub-committee's proposals.

The sub-committee recommended that paths be left in their natural state except for annual trimming to keep them accessible to walkers; that a drainage study be carried out to find out why runoff water is saturating and pooling in the park faster than it can be absorbed; and that the park boundaries be precisely established.

Once the limits of the park are known, the sub-committee suggests a spring cleanup, after which residents living near the park would be asked to cooperate in keeping the park in its unspoiled state.

The sub-committee also suggests a ban on incinerators in the park and it wants the fire department to monitor incinerator use in the park area.

Some residents complained last fall that overgrowth and erosion were making paths inaccesible.

Council at that time rejected a proposal to pave park paths, a widely supported stand.

Sidney shuns offer to operate airport

Sidney council has no intention of taking over the operation of Victoria International Airport as requested by the federal government.

Sidney Mayor Norma Sealey said the plan, which was discussed at a committee of the whole meeting Monday, has no apparent advantages for her community but does carry some definite disadvantages, like the possiblity of the municipality being forced to carry any deficits in capital and operating costs.

The committee of the whole unanimously turned down a proposal by the federal government offering Sidney the opportunity to take over the operation of the airport. Sealey said she understands a similar presentation will be made to other municipalities in the Capital Regional District.

Airport Manager James Mills has already made a presentation on the matter to Oak Bay council, she said.

The federal government is making the same proposal to municipalities which surround 23 other airports in the country.

"Frankly I can't see any advantages for us if we took the airport over. Some people are convinced it might mean more local control but I can't see it. The federal government will retain control over safety, operations, just about everything that would make any difference."

Sealey said the proposal is an effort by Ottawa to cut federal costs by passing them on to local government. She said the report on the proposal from the federal government was vague and contradictory about how deficits incurred by airports would be funded.

Sealey said the community doesn't have any major complaints about the actual operation of the airport although there are problems with noise and the number of flights, neither of which would be under the jurisdiction of the proposed local control body.

The golden rush for silver

By MIKE HUGHES

The B.C. roe herring fishery is suffering because of inadequate conservation measures.

Too much fishing gear is chasing dwindling stocks on the major spawning grounds in a manner fishermen describe as chaotic.

This dog-eat-dog rush for the silvery fish is damaging the grounds and changing the behavioral patterns of the herring. Even the way the seine nets and gillnets catch the fish disrupts the grounds and leads to a questionable waste of the resource.

But there are as many opinions on how to remedy the situation as there are interest groups involved.

Fleet divided

Even among the fishermen there is no unanimity.

Some want a vessel quota system established so that the catch would be shared equitably among the whole herring fleet.

Others say this takes the competitive edge away from the experienced fishermen and removes some of the fiercely-independent flavor of their way of life.

There are those who favor dividing the coast into economic areas and only allowing so many boats to fish for a fixed quota of herring in each zone. Those fishing the area would be allowed to catch as much as they could until the area's quota was met.

One opinion, shared by many fishermen, is that the fishing gear should be spread more evenly in the various fishing spots and the season extended.

Separate waves

They say there are as many as three waves or "flushes" of herring coming in to spawn and now only the first wave is cropped. If the same seasonal quota was kept but fish taken from all three flushes, a more orderly, efficient and controlled fishery would result.

Some groups, like Greenpeace, would like to see the seining and gillnetting of the herring phased out and methods adopted which don't kill the fish.

Since the herring can spawn several times during a life which can last as long as 10 years, they argue that it is a waste to kill all those fish just for a luxury item which is exported to Japan.

Healthy harvest

That argument is countered by others who say the resource is healthiest when harvested properly, that it is just as irresponsible to ignore a food source as it is to exploit it.

One fisherman, who didn't want to be identified, says the only proper way to fish herring from a conservation point of view is to scrap the seines and gillnets and use weirs, enclosures made of stakes which trap the fish in the water.

There is general agreement from fishermen and spokesmen for fish companies that the federal fisheries department is mismanaging the resource.

There is not enough research being done into the changing behavior of the herring or the effect the gear has on the spawning grounds. Fisheries doesn't seem to be assuming a leadership role in ensuring the rush for the roe doesn't lead to a rape of the resource.

Horror tales

Fishermen tell stories of boats being involved in the fishery which shouldn't be and licences being swapped and leased in a highly improper manner.

One gillnet licence, which is not transferable, was reportedly leased for $50,000 during the height of last year's lucrative season.

There are tales of spawning grounds being ripped up by seine nets or disturbed on the eve of a spawn by rowdies tooling around in skiffs, of garbage and diesel oil being dumped on the grounds.

Fisheries officials defend themselves by saying they have pressed for more research funds for years without success. They also say managing the resource is difficult when there are so many groups to appease.

Cliff Gissing, of Victoria, who has been fishing on the coast for 28 years and closely involved with the herring fishery, sees the problem this way:

"The boats' ability to catch herring is advancing so fast that management can't keep up with it."

He qualifies this by saying management's difficulties in coping with the new technology have been complicated by the greed that has been evident in the past two or three seasons on the part of all those engaged in the fishery.

Gissing served for about a year on the Herring Advisory Committee, a 17-member body made up of representatives from the various interest groups in the industry.

'Layer' discovery

He has also done some test fishing for the fisheries department and observed the herring's behavior at close range.

It was while conducting a test of a net to catch those fish which drop out of the gillnet when it is being "shaken" in the punt that he discovered the herring come into the spawning ground in layers.

Furthest down are the "ripe" females. Then there is a sprinking of males until at the top it is all males.

Gissing quibbles with those who say the stocks are in trouble because, he says, there were plenty of fish on the summer fishing grounds.

"Nobody has convinced me yet that the industry is in trouble.

"The only portion of the resource that is in trouble is in those areas where there is a heavy collection of gear every year."

New licensing

Gissing says the solution is to find a method to spread the gear over the whole coast and begin fishing areas which are ignored now because they can't handle the large fleet and where the herring are "dying of old age."

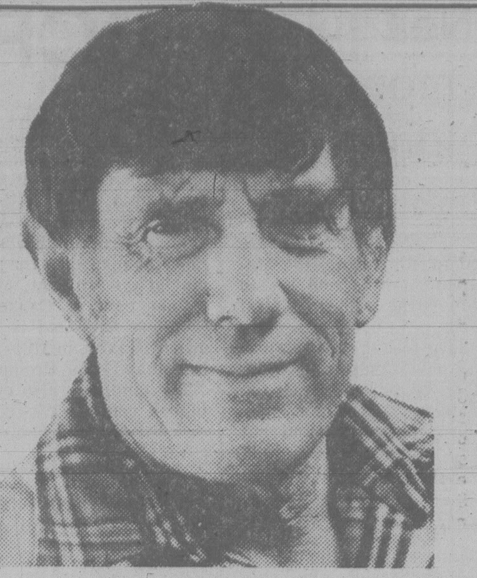
Bill Procopation, business agent for the 8,000-member United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, says the union wants a safe, sane, rational fishery.

To achieve that, he says, the fisheries department should work on reorganizing the licensing system which is being abused and has all kinds of inequities built into it.

To take the rat-race aspects out of the season, there should be definite upper limits on the number of fish taken out of an area.

Fisheries should allow only a fixed number of seine boats to set, for example, and when they reach their quota they are replaced by others until the area quota is met.

The season should be extended by taking advantage of the three "flushes" of spawning herring, Procopation says.



Fisherman Gissing

No rat race

Once these measures are taken then the various groups can sit down and work out who should be allowed to fish and how it should be carried out.

"Let's get through this season and let's not have the rat race," Procopation says.

Jerry Spitz, president of the Fisheries Association of B.C., says the flaw in the union's call for vessel quotas is that it doesn't reduce the size of the fleet.

"What the union is forgetting is that theoretically all those boats could be fishing in one area."

Wrong idea

Spitz says the general public seems to have the wrong idea about fishermen.

"Fishermen are not stupid. They are not a bunch of greedy, money-hungry free enterprisers.

"They are interested in conservation."

Spitz says he doesn't think the government has gone far enough in restricting the number of boats allowed on the fishing grounds nor has the fisheries department done enough research on the fishery, he says.

Cliff Atleo of the Native Brotherhood of B.C. says the problem is "there is not enough management happening.

"Greater research money is needed. It's shameful. It's pitiful."

Louiz Souza, secretary-manager of the 110-member Fishing Vessel Owners Association of B.C., says the industry is in deep trouble.

"A lot depends on the department. They've got to pull up their socks.

"They don't have any long-term policies. They're just patching up as they go along and that is just not good enough."

Sol Sinclair produced a report for the federal fisheries department in 1978 in which he recommended a licensing and fee system for all coastal fisheries.

He said the problem with B.C. fisheries is the continuing one of excessive fishing power for a limited supply of fish.

Balance sought

"The solution then lies in reducing fishing power to bring it into balance with the available fishing supplies."

He recommended a licence fee with a catch royalty to produce the desired balance.

A per vessel licence fee ranging from $200 for the smallest to $2,000 for the largest should be payable by every vessel operator for the right to fish commercially in B.C. waters, Sinclair said.

Barkers can be taken

NANAIMO (CP) — City council has passed an anti-noise bylaw which will allow bylaw officers to enter private homes to remove barking dogs.

Aldermen admitted the bylaw might be illegal but passed it 5-4 and decided to test it in the courts if challenged.

Hydro settlement

VANCOUVER (CP) — A two-year agreement between British Columbia Hydro and Local 378 of the Office and Technical Employees Union has been ratified by the union after more than a year of negotiations.

The settlement, retroactive to April 1, 1979, will give workers an eight-percent increase in each of two years, plus double time for overtime on Saturdays, Sundays and statutory holidays.

Riverview escape

COQUITLAM (CP) — A 31-year-old man who went missing from the Riverview Hospital forensic unit here during the weekend has been apprehended in Alberta, an RCMP spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman said Randolph Mead, committed in 1974 in Kamloops on a charge of murder, was in custody in Lethbridge.

Doctors sued

VERNON (CP) — Two doctors, five nurses and Spallumcheen Hospital in nearby Armstrong have been named in a writ claiming negligence in the death of a four-year-old boy last year.

The writ says Daniel Richard Kovic was admitted to the hospital last March for elective surgery. Complications developed and he was transferred to Kelowna General Hospital where he died five days later.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Christine Louise Johnstone, 19, of Chilliwack, has been awarded $192,200 for injuries she received when struck by a car while riding a motorcycle with her sister.

Near-blind mom has long wait

"He (Mair) had two choices," North said. "He could either attack the situation as it is and try to relieve the crisis in hospital beds, or he could attack me and he took the easy way."

North admitted in an interview, however, that the patient's condition deteriorated quickly and that he did not see the man between June and November, including a missed appointment in October.

"The complication was a painless one — the old fellow didn't complain," said the doctor.

Mair said the hospital first heard from North on July 26, 1979, in booking surgery for his patient for Dec. 6. Several elective surgical cases were later cancelled on that date by the hospital and re-booked for Dec. 27, which North agreed to, Mair said.

Mair said North had the option of calling the hospital again and advising that the patient, because of possible deterioriating condition, had to be booked as an urgent or emergency case.

"If the patient were in as desperate a condition as Dr. North now retrospectively portrays him, I would have expected him to have called the hospital requesting the booking be changed from the elective to the urgent or emergency list," the minister said.

North admitted he could not do that because he was not fully aware of the patient's condition.

"Until that last pre-op, no, I couldn't (have the patient booked immediately). And without following him very closely, I couldn't."

North said, however, he thinks he has made his point about the shortage of acute care beds in Victoria.

"I've got them talking about this anyway. Maybe something will come out of it.

In the meantime, Leighton says, his mother's vision gets cloudier every day.

"She can't even recognize people now, she's so blind — if that's not urgent, what is? "It may not be a life-and-death situation as far as the hospital is concerned, but it's very frustrating to the people involved," he said.

"I'd like to see my mother get her sight back by the summer, not have to wait until next winter," Leighton said.

57 seats in the 100-member Parliament.

Rival guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo won 24.1 per cent of the votes, getting 20 seats, and Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the outgoing prime minister, finished a poor third with 8.2 per cent and only three seats.

Mugabe told his first news conference as prime minister-elect he would form a government "reassuring to the whole nation," including posts for Nkomo's party and the conservative white Rhodesian Front party led by former Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Smith controls 20 parliamentary seats reserved for whites, which were voted upon in an election two weeks ago.

Mugabe also announced he was retaining Lt. Gen. Peter Walls, the commander of Rhodesia's combined operations headquarters and the man who directed Rhodesia's effort to frustrate the seven-year guerrilla war. Walls' agreement to stay on assures Mugabe of the loyalty of the country's 34,000-man security forces.

Mugabe also reiterated pledges to respect private property, saying Rhodesia's economy is primarily capitalist and "whatever ideas we have must be built on that."

Nkomo, who broke down in tears when he learned of his election defeat, said he was prepared to co-operate with Mugabe.

Muzorewa, who apparently will be offered no place in the Mugabe government, said he would accept the results of the voting even though he felt the elections were "unfree and unfair."

BCRIC buying into Kaiser, M-B operations

The share purchase will improve BCRIC's clout as a major factor in B.C.'s forest industry. BCRIC, established originally as a holding firm for corporations taken over by the provincial government, owns 81 per cent of Canadian Cellulose Co., and is full owner of Plateau Mills and Kootenay Forest Products.

The company also owns 10 per cent of Westcoast Transmission, a major pipeline utility operating primarily in B.C, and holds oil and gas licences on 2.3 million acres of Crown land in northeastern B.C.

Helliwell said the purchase would give BCRIC a significant minority holding in MacMillan Bloedel's substantial forest holdings in B.C. and elsewhere.

"Our studies show that MacMillan Bloedel represents one of the best opportunities in the province to further our position in the forest products industry."

MacMillan Bloedel is B.C.'s largest private employer and one of the country's largest integrated forest companies with sales and other income of $2.2 billion last year from pulp, paper, lumber and plywood operations.

There had been rumors for some time that BCRIC, which has its first general shareholders meeting planned for later this month, was on the verge of a major share purchase.

BCRIC's large cash holding came as a side benefit from the Premier Bill Bennett-proposed giveaway of five free shares of the company to each eligible British Columbian last year. About two million persons in the province applied for the free shares.

Many more bought up to the maximum of 5,000 shares for an individual at $6 each. By the time the distribution ended, about 78 million shares had been distributed and close to $500 million raised.

Trading in the BCRIC shares began on the Vancouver and Toronto stock exchanges in August last year and at one point last year were valued at more than $9 each. Monday, they closed on both markets at $8⅝.

The BCRIC move to acquire the CP Investments holdings came just over a year after Bennett and MacMillan Bloedel's directors blocked a bid by the Montreal-based company to take over MacMillan Bloedel.

Premier Bennett said today of the BCRIC moves:

"It's of interest to see BCRIC, on behalf of the shareholders, making moves to extend B.C. ownership of major corporations operating within the province. I think that would be cheered by the shareholders and most British Columbians."

Bennett would not comment on the wisdom of the purchase as an investment.

NDP leader Dave Barrett reserved comment on BCRIC's buys.

The Admiral's Cat is the cat's meow, according to her owner, retired admiral Dick Leir.

The admiral and his Family Catboat took part in Sidney's own boat show on the weekend, strutting their stuff in one of the most unique shows of its kind.

Organized by National Boat Sales of White Birch Road, the show featured boats that are built locally, most of them designed by local marine architects.

The catboat is a familiar sight on the east coast where it first came into prominénce at Cape Cod and Chesapeake Bay in the 1780s when roads were almost non-existent and the catboat was used to haul the family cow and produce to market.

Marine architect Bill Garden, who lives on Toad's Landing off Sidney, designed the show-stealer of the Sidney show. Internationally-known for the variety of boats he's designed, Garden is playing a major role in the resurgence of the boat-building industry in this part of the world.

In the case of the Family Cat, he took the best features of the waterborne workhorses of earlier days and translated them into a craft that will appeal to boaters who want a craft that stands out in these days of conformity.

As Leir put it, "I went to both the Vancouver and Toronto boat shows this year and all you could see was a bunch of wedding cakes."

The Family Cat measures 23 feet over-all and has a wide beam of 10 feet. When her retractable keel is raised her draft is only two feet, three inches. Keel down, she draws six feet. With her economical eight horse-power Yanmar diesel she motors happily at six knots.

Built by Bill Boyd Boats for Saturna Yachts Inc. of Saanich, her cabin and cockpit are lavishly finished in wood. The cabin is heated by a stove that burns both wood and coal.

Boyd began building Family Cats last June. Nine have already been launched and three of them have been sold to United States customers.

Garden works hand-in-glove with Sidney boatbuilders.

Denny Coverdale of Philbrooks Shipyard said Garden is always at hand for advice when he's needed. Philbrooks had a Philbrooks E 3200 Express Trawler, an original and sophisticated design from the drawing board of Enno Lepnurm, at the Sidney show.

Garden, who said the Family Cat was the most photogenic of his boats in the Sidney show, also had others that demanded attention. These were the Truant 33 and Truant 370 pilothouse sloops, built by Saturna Yachts Inc. and Truant Marine of Salt Spring Island respectively.

Garden, whose name has become synonomous with his many designs of traditional sailboats, says whether his design is sail or power, the design he is working on at any given moment becomes his obsession until it is completed.

Two other local designers were featured in the Sidney show. There was a Pacific Pilot 27 motorsailor, designed by Sidney architect John Lovett for Skookum Manufacturing, and a Coaster 23, a four-berth diesel cruiser, designed by Dick Chudley of R.F.C. Marine Ltd. in Sidney.

TOWN TALK

Anyone who thinks a hydrofoil service between Victoria and Seattle is a good idea ought to ask Hawaiian Islanders what they think, says Frank Keifer, 504 Linden.

Keifer said he's writing a letter to Sam Bawlf, a major force behind a private company pushing for the service, to tell him about the failed hydrofoil run between the Hawaiian Islands.

Boeing's Seaflight hydrofoil ran for three years plagued with constant breakdowns and was finally pulled off the route this year, he said.

The idea is twice as ridiculous for the Victoria-Seattle run, Keifer says, because with all the kelp and deadheads floating in the strait it would be easy for a hydrofoil — which has a cruising speed of 42 knots — to suck up all kinds of debris in its powerful pumps.

Keifer also pointed out that on a trial run of a jetfoil service in the summer of 1978 the craft was unable to gather enough speed to leave the Inner Harbor because it picked up too much debris. The jetfoil had to be towed back by a passing charter boat.

Strathcona Park Lodge owner Jim Boulding's as pleased as punch today.

The reason? Boulding played midwife Monday, delivering a bouncing eight-pound, seven-ounce boy in the back seat of a car parked at the side of the highway.

Seems Mr. and Mrs. Art Twiggs, speeding to Campbell River from Gold River in a desperate bid to beat the stork, pulled in at the lodge seeking a doctor when it was apparent that the baby's arrival was imminent.

No doctor was handy so a small convoy headed off with the Twiggs followed by Boulding and lodge employee Nancy Brown.

Two miles down the road, the Twiggs stopped and the baby started.

There were no problems and mom and baby are in great shape in hospital.

Firefighters [illegible] and Dave Noren had just finished showing the kids the different apparatus and explaining its use when an apartment block fire alarm sounded at 1204 Yates next door to the hall.

Alexis and Noren jumped on the back of the truck and the kids streamed out the front door and watched as the fire crew put out the blaze in a third-floor suite.

Firemen said the blaze, caused by careless smoking, did about $6,000 damage. No one was in the apartment.

If you're waiting for the report on staffing standards at James Bay Lodge promised by Health Minister Rafe Mair, don't hold your breath.

It's three months since Mair said he would look into the situation at James Bay, where two elderly residents died in falls, but he had no answer ready when the issue was raised in the legislature Monday.

Mair took the question from NDP critic Dennis Cocke on notice.

Soon after announcing his inquiry into the James Bay Lodge matter, Mair said he was expanding the investigation to include staffing requirements in all long-term care facilities. That investigation is still going on, the minister said recently.

The B.C. government pension plan may have more than $1 billion in unfunded liabilities but, says Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe: "We are in good shape in B.C."

The minister said the B.C. plan, like all other pension plans in North America, is caught in the inflation spiral.

Revised hotel okayed

The design of a hotel proposed for Douglas and Herald streets, rejected by city council last November as a "piece of junk," has been approved after redesign.

Sandman Inns Ltd., a Vancouver-based company run by the family of former Social Credit highways minister Phil Gaglardi, was given permission today by the land use planning committee to erect a six-storey, 120-room hotel with restaurant, swimming pool and underground parking.

Architect Henry Pimiskern said the hotel will cost between $4 and $5 million.

City council last fall rejected the original design as unsuitable for the strategic location at the entrance to downtown.

Saanich's street pitch short of money mark

Saanich came hat in hand to Victoria City Hall today asking for funds to help complete Finlayson Street through to Hillside shopping centre but council's traffic committee gave moral support only and called for Saanich to put its money up front.

Alderman Sandy Noel said Saanich is willing to pay for extending the street across Bowker Creek to link up with North Dairy Road but it would like Victoria to help pay for part of the drainage project required to extend the road.

The committee referred to a 1978 motion by Victoria city council which said the city had no objection to putting Finlayson through to Shelbourne — to link up Mayfair and Hillside shopping centres — but it was not a high priority and Victoria was not interested in sharing the cost with its neighbor to the north.

Alderman Bob Wright said Saanich now wants two things, the city's support and the city's money.

"We give you our blessings and good wishes to complete that," he told Noel.

"The second thing is a little harder."

City engineer John Sansom said the minimum cost of putting the creek inside a culvert would probably be $25,000. Noel also said additional storm drains would have to be built and Victoria should also pay part of the cost since some of the water flowing into Bowker Creek comes from Victoria.

Finlayson and North Dairy form the boundary between the two municipalities in this area.

Sansom and the committee laughed at Noel's claim of storm waters crossing the border. The engineer said the catchment area is totally inside Saanich.

Ald. Bill McElroy said the city will have to do dye tests to see if any Victoria storm drains feed into the creek at that point.

In the end the committee voted to support the street extension in principle but asked Noel to come back with a firm figure on estimate costs. Victoria city planning department was also instructed to look into the proposal and report back to the committee.

McElroy said the extension would benefit Victoria by protecting the residential neighborhood just north of Hillside, which now sees a lot of traffic trying to find its way from Finlayson to the Hillside shopping centre. The extension would also ease traffic congestion on Hillside from Cedar Hill to Shelbourne, McElroy said.

But the principal disadvantage would be to increase traffic on Finlayson, which is mainly a residential street.

Six new theatres coming

The Capitol Theatre at Blanshard and Yates Street is to be demolished and $3½ million replacement containing six separate theatres is to be erected on the site.

City council's land use planning committee today approved a demolition permit for Famous Players Inc.

City planner Geoff Greenhalgh said the new theatre complex will also occupy the parking lot at the rear of the existing Capitol Theatre.

Agreement reached on Turgoose housing

After nearly two years of negotiations, Canada Trust and Central Saanich council appear to have reached agreement on a major development on 25½ acres the company owns near Turgoose Point, east of the Pat Bay highway near Mount Newton crossroad.

The proposal calls for a mix of high class single-family, townhouse and apartment units and represents the largest single housing development ever undertaken in the municipality.

Council Monday night gave unanimous support for the conditions of a land use contract negotiated to date and referred the matter to the advisory planning commission for recommendation.

Ald. George MacFarlane, chairman of council's subdivision and zoning committee said in an interview today a public hearing into the proposal could be held as early as April 8 when two other smaller applications for rezoning are set to be heard.

Municipal development officer Gay Wheeler said the proposal includes 19 single-family dwellings to be built on one-quarter of the property, 175 apartment units in four separate three-storey blocks on another quarter, and 106 townhouses on the remaining portion.

The development is scheduled to take eight years but could be completed sooner if demand warrants it.

Wheeler said the company has agreed to dedicate 2.56 acres of waterfront to the municipality for parkland and has promised to build walkways and beach access paths.

Weight woes hit schools

There is a disturbingly high incidence of overweight students in B.C. schools, says an education ministry report released Monday.

The report also said tests on 3,000 students in Grades 3, 7, and 11 showed the physical fitness and motor ability of secondary school females, and of males and female elementary school pupils are poor.

The report indicates that students' knowledge and understanding of physical education are lacking.

Bus firm joins regional system

By PAT DUFOUR

A merger of Vancouver Island Transit Ltd. with the urban transport operations, effective April 1, was announced by Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm Monday.

"In order to introduce greater economies into the sytem and to afford users improved service, I believe it makes good sense to integrate all of the best services that are to form the regional transport system because the regional district will be planning the entire system," the minister said.

VITL at present provides bus services on the Saanich Peninsula to Sidney and Swartz Bay and in the Western Community as far as Sooke.

"From time to time over the past few years additional services have been introduced by VITL but the service has never been sufficient to meet the growing demands of the area residents," Vander Zalm said.

He said the growing demand for bus service in the more densely populated areas of the Saanich Peninsula and the Western Community requires an ability to respond efficiently and quickly to those demands.

The minister said the new services will probably be more in line with the urban style operations of the Metropolitan Transit Operating Company (the urban transit operating agency of the provincial government for Greater Victoria and Greater Vancouver) rather than the inter-city operation of Pacific Coach Lines.

The labor agreement between VITL and the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATU) representing VITL employees is identical to that between B.C. Hydro Transit and its successor, the MTOC, and the ATU.

The provincial government established the Urban Transit Authority in 1978 to enable local governments to determine local transit services, routes and fares and established a cost-sharing formula between the two levels of government.

Regional district, company and labor representatives attending Monday's meeting all expressed approval of the new merger.

Union members said they are prepared to make sure the transaction goes smoothly.

Hackner only unbeaten rink; Horrigan wins both games

Times News Services

CALGARY — Al Hackner, called the Iceman by his Northern Ontario team-mates, played the role to the hilt Monday night after a 10-5 win over Alberta's Paul Gowsell, while Victoria's Tim Horrigan kept B.C. much in the running for the Canadian men's curling championship by winning both his games.

"We're quite satisfied," said Hackner, skip of the only undefeated rink and the leader at 4-0 in the Canadian men's curling championship. "They (Alberta) probably had a bit of an off game."

Hackner, 25, from Nipigon, Ont., was downplaying his role in the fifth draw of the 12-rink competition. He made a brilliant double takeout by drawing around a long guard in the third end to give the Thunder Bay team a 3-1 lead, then came through with a cold draw in the fourth for two points and a 5-2 margin.

Horrigan and his Victoria Curling Club crew toppled New Brunswick 7-5 on the late draw after winning handily over Newfoundland 9-6 in the afternoon. He had a bye in the morning.

Against Newfoundland, Horrigan went ahead 6-1 after three ends with threes on the first and third end, then stole a pair on the fourth for an 8-1 margin. He was never in trouble.

Against New Brunswick, a deuce on the first end followed by a steal of two on the second gave Horrigan breathing space. He was 6-2 after six to coast home from there.

It was definitely an off night for Gowsell, one of the early favorites in the Labatt Brier, along with Saskatchewan's Rick Folk of Saskatoon and Quebec's Jim Ursel of Montreal, winner of the 1977 title.

In the fifth end, the young Calgary skip was light with a draw for two and got one point. And, in the seventh, he was light with another draw, and Hackner stole two for an 8-3 lead.

Folk, representing his province for the third consecutive year, was alone in second place at 3-1. Alberta, Quebec, Ontario's Russ Howard of Penetanguishene and B.C. were at 2-1, while Yellowknife's Al Delmage, representing the Territories, was 2-2.

At 1-3 in the standings were Earle Morris, skip of the Manitoba rink from Winnipeg, New Brundwick's Richard Belyea of Saint John, Peter Hope and his Nova Scotia entry from Dartmouth, Newfoundland's Wayne Hamilton of St. John's and Ted MacFadyen's Prince Edward Island crew from Crapaud.

In other fifth-round results, Ursel drew to the button with his final shot in an extra end to beat Manitoba 6-5, Ontario downed Nova Scotia 8-5 and the Territories scored a point in the 10th end to shade P.E.I. 7-6.

Northern Ontario stole two in the 10th end to beat Ontario 7-5 in the fourth draw.

In other games, Saskatchewan dumped the Territories 6-3, Alberta outlasted Manitoba 7-5, Quebec scored three in the ninth and stole one in the 10th for a 10-7 win over Nova Scotia.

In the morning, Belyea's New Brunswick rink turned in a strong performance to surprise Saskatchewan 8-5 and Newfoundland shaded P.E.I. 8-7 in an extra end.

After raising his record to 4-0, Hackner said he wasn't surprised by his team's showing but added that he wasn't going to get over-confident.

The Hackner rink, from the Fort William Curling Club, had an impressive record of 18 wins and one defeat from club playoffs to the Northern Ontario final, leading to the national tournament.

Emmett Ashford: had historic part in sport

The weekend in review and I see where the closing chapter to another piece of history has been written.

Emmett Ashford, the first negro to umpire in the major leagues, died Saturday of a heart attack.

Victoria baseball fans of a more than quarter of a century ago will remember Ashford. A short and rather dumpy individual with a pleasant personality and a booming voice, Ashford spent one year of his time in the old Western International League, then moved on to the Pacific Coast League until finally, 11 years later, he got the historic call to the majors.

It had been a long, tough road for Ashford before he ever got the WIL. For he was black and at a time when blacks weren't all that welcome in baseball, even as players. But as an umpire! "When I started, there were many times I had my doubts," he said then.

That's when he was alone in his class — the only negro umpire in organized baseball — and it wasn't all a bed of roses, as can be imagined.

This was six years after Jackie Robinson had broken the color barrier for players and people still weren't sure it was all for the best, especially in the south and in small towns ("the sticks" as they are known in baseball). Who knew what could happen after a game . . . and on a dark night?

Actually, Ashford had his career beginning in a semi-professional men's softball league in Arizona. That was fine except he wasn't welcome at any inn in the town when he arrived for his first game and he had to drive across the Mexican border to find his night's lodgings. Things weren't much better later on in the matter of accommodation, but he managed.

He made his pro baseball debut in the Southwest International League in 1951, then moved along to the Arizona-Texas League the next year and his first day at the ball park was something else to remember too.

It was a holiday double header at Mexicalli and when his fellow umpires saw they would have to work with a negro, they refused. So Ashford and a volunteer from another city worked the double header and two more games the next day. Ashford was behind the plate in all four games — flamboyantly, as was his style — the players liked what he did, the fans took to him as well, and he had passed his first official test with flying colors.

"That did it," he once said. "When you can please Mexican fans, you can please anybody."

So he gave up 16 years seniority in the U.S. Postal Service and reported to a town in Texas for his next assignment. He was worried, of course, but except for normal umpiring problems and at times that ever-present lodging hangup, he lived through it.

He got his chance in the WIL when Dewey Soriano, who later was to become PCL president, had him umpiring grapefruit league games in California in the spring of '53.

Soriano, who was with Vancouver then, was always Ashford's biggest booster. And it was in 1965 that Soriano finally got the message across to American League president Joe Cronin that Ashford deserved a chance — not just because he was black, but because he was a good umpire.

Obviously Ashford made good there, which was to be expected. But he never fulfilled his one latter-day ambition: to call balls and strikes, at which he was one of the best, in a world series.

He got assigned to a series, all right, but he missed his chance behind the plate in 1970 when Baltimore Orioles defeated Cincinnati Reds in five games. It would have been his turn the next game.

Ashford always knew what he wanted and would turn down an ivitation for a brew or two with the simple explanation: "I've come this far and, much as I'd like to, I can't be seen anywhere like that. I think you understand."

He was popular here, with the fans and with the players. He was also articulate and charming with a delightful sense of humor.

Which is perhaps why he was working for baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn as the commissioner's west coast aide on public relations when he was struck down last week.

And a long, long way from a six-bits flop in a Mexican border town on a hot and humid summer night.

Sports tonight

League and playoff hockey action are on tap tonight for live-action sports fans while television viewers can take in the World Cup downhill ski race from Lake Louise and a National Basketball Association game between Portland Trail Blazers and Seattle SuperSonics.

Victoria Cougars face Saskatoon Blades at 8 in a Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

At 7:30, Saanich Braves and Juan de Fuca Gulls square off in the second game of their best-of-three South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League playoff semi-final series at Pearkes Arena.

The NBA game is scheduled for 8 on Channel 7.

Ranger contract rates Silk smile

NEW YORK (AP) — David Silk was smiling when the telephone call ended. He had been speaking with Phil Esposito, one of his new New York Ranger clubmates.

"I can't believe this," said Silk, who Monday became the seventh member of the U.S. Olympic team to sign with a National Hockey League club. "He made me feel so at home."

Home for Silk, is Scituate, Mass. — Boston Bruin territory to some.

"The Boston Bruins had more than their chance to draft me and make me a part of their hockey club, but they saw fit that they didn't want to draft me," said the right winger, 22, a cousin of Bruins' defenceman Mike Milbury. "The New York Rangers gave me the chance to try to play hockey, and from that point on, I've become a New York Ranger all the way."

The Rangers made the former Boston University star their fourth-round selection in the 1978 draft. Assistant coach Mike Nykoluk said Monday night team management would decide after this morning's workout whether Silk would join the Rangers for their game Wednesday night against Buffalo.

"It isn't certain at all that he'll play Wednesday," said Nykoluk. "We'll have to take a good look at him in practice to see what we're going to do."

Sunday night, hours before announcing his signing of a multi-year contract, Silk met at Madison Square Garden with Garden president Sonny Werblin, general manager-coach Fred Shero and Nykoluk.

Other Olympians who have signed NHL contracts are goaltenders Jim Craig (Atlanta) and Steve Janaszak (Minnesota), centres Mark Johnson (Pittsburgh) and Dave Christian (Winnipeg), defenceman Ken Morrow (New York Islanders) and centre-right winger Steve Christoff (Minnesota).

In the only league game played Monday night, Wayne Babych finally got his mind off his sore shoulder and his two-goal performance in St. Louis Blues' 5-1 win over Pittsburgh Penguins may presage a different kind of pain for the rest of the National Hockey League.

"We're aiming at one of the top eight spots in the final standings so we can have home ice advantage in the playoffs," said Babych, 22. "I felt I had to do something personally because I missed a lot of chances the last two games (back-to-back losses to Hartford).

"I blamed my sore shoulder for my play, but I was only fooling myself. I have to forget about my shoulder and play the body to force opposing defencemen to give me some room."

Babych's goals, both of them on first-period power plays, were matched by Larry Patey's pair. Bernie Federko chipped in one while goalie Mike Liut held off the luckless Penguins in the only NHL game Monday night.

Only Dale Tallon's first-period shot, one of 33 directed on the St. Louis goal by the Penguins, eluded Liut.

Business can't afford dallying on Olympics

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese companies may lose millions in Olympic gold — the monetary rather than prize-winning kind — if Japan follows the United States proposed boycott of the Moscow Games.

With the start of the Games four months away, toys and trinkets bearing Olympic trademarks already fill store windows in Japanese cities. Travel companies have arranged flights and hotels for would-be Moscow tours. Broadcasters are planning massive coverage for an event which may be shunned by viewers and sponsors alike.

The Japanese government said last month that it "was desirable" that Japan's Olympic Committee boycott the Moscow Games because of the Soviet presence in Afghanistan. The JOC in turn insists there is no need to make a hasty decision and is now brooding silently on the issue.

Business, however, cannot afford such dallying. "We have no choice but to go ahead with our original plans," said Shisei Yano, an Olympic planning section member at Television Asahi, a private network which three years ago outbid rivals for exclusive rights to the Games.

Yano said TV Asahi still plans to send a 126-member team to Moscow and has allotted 214 hours viewing time for the two-week event. But he said if the United States and Japan drop out they may make substantial cuts in their telecasts, "which would be quite unprofitable."

It is estimated that TV Asahi has already paid $7.9 million for broadcasting rights, technical cooperation fees, and equipment use. Yano said most of this investment is not redeemable as long as the International Olympic Committee recognizes the right of Moscow to hold the Games.

About 25 travel agencies have already spent $416,000 for 38,000 of the 42,000 tickets allotted to Japan for the Games and have prepared package tours for an estimated 12,000 people at prices ranging from $1,250 to $3,300.

But Yoshiro Ikegaya, an official of Kinki Nippon Tourist Co., guessed that only 1,500 of the 3,200 packages his company is handling will finally be purchased. "The sales outlook is not bright," he said.

Unlike the Japan Olympic Committee, which has until May to decide whether to send a team to Moscow, tour purchasers must decide by the end of April whether to cancel, or lose advance payments for hotels and dining. Tickets to athletic events are nonrefundable.

Canucks ordered to pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Hockey Club Ltd. was ordered Monday in British Columbia Supreme Court to pay into court the $400,000 judgment won earlier by former Canucks player Mike Robitaille of the National Hockey League team.

The hockey club is appealing the judgment and resisted the application to pay the judgment.

"It seems to me to be patently unfair and unjust for the defendant to have the use of the plaintiff's money pending appeal," said Justice Patricia Proudfoot.

She ordered that the amount of money involved, which she said was in excess of $400,000, be paid into court so that the interest could accrue to Robitaille.

The order provides that the interest can be paid out to Robitaille upon his filing a bank letter of credit to reimburse the hockey club if the appeal should be successful.

Robitaille was awarded judgment for $347,840 in December when Mr. Justice W. A. Esson of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled that the hockey club was negligent in ignoring Robitaille's complaint of injuries three years ago.

The judge ruled that Robitaille was 20 per cent to blame for his own misfortune and reduced his total award of $435,000 by that amount.

Justice Proudfoot said the hockey club was not impecunious and it would not create a hardship for the club to pay the money into court.

The benefit to be reaped here was many thousands of dollars, she said, and the scales of justice weighed in favor of Robitaille. The interest rate on the money will be at one per cent below the prime rate.

Does showman miss the crowd?

"What do you think would happen if I came back," Muhammad Ali asked an interviewer after being named athlete of the decade for the 1970s by The Associated Press.

Unfortunately, it looks like we're going to find out. The former champion says he'll fight again. Promoter Bob Arum is talking about Ali fighting John Tate for the World Boxing Association heavyweight championship at New Orleans in June.

The interviewer's answer to Ali's question had been: "It'd be tough, and you don't have anything to prove."

"That's right," retorted Ali. "You said the word. I have nothing else to prove."

So now, he's going to prove something.

He can make the impossible possible again, but he's already proved he is one of history's most incredible athletes. He's more likely to prove that he is no longer that greatest and prettiest heavyweight in the world, just the oldest.

Ali has always said he wouldn't end up like Joe Louis, and he won't . . . financially.

But Ali's announced intention of returning to the ring brought to mind a picture often seen in magazines and books about boxing. It shows a Louis, the devastating Brown Bomber who defended the heavyweight title 25 times, lying on the ring apron after being knocked through the ropes by Rocky Marciano and Father Time.

Granted, neither John Tate nor Larry Holmes, the World Boxing Council champ, is in the class of Rocky Marciano. The point is, though, that Ali, at 38, now IS in the same class as Louis, who was 37 when he was knocked out by Marciano in 1951.

Ali has had four fights in 41 months — a dull decision over Alfredo Evangelista and a decision after a hard 15 rounds over Earnie Shavers in 1977; a loss to inexperienced Leon Spinks and an historic but not especially impressive win over Spinks that made him an unprecedented three-time heavyweight champion Sept. 15, 1978.

Ali's reflexes now are those of a 38-year-old who once was a great fighter, better than that of your average 38-year-old man but no longer those of a world-class fighter.

Ali has had to shoot the knuckles of his right hand with cortisone for several years before fighting. He also has calcium deposits in his neck and there have long been whispers of potential kidney trouble.

The rumors and the facts all add up to potential danger for Ali against an improving fighter like bull-strong John Tate, 24.

Why does Ali want to come back?

Sure, there's pressure from promoters and interest from television networks. Ali says his Muslim religion is having problems, with mosques and schools closing. And he might need the money — although he's not broke — to continue his lifestyle.

Then, there could be another reason. Ali the showman misses the roar of the crowd.

It is hoped before Ali signs a contract to fight again, that he will think back to his crowded dressing room in the New Orleans Superdome when he became champion for the third time.

"What do you think about the old man who outdanced him all night?" Ali asked.

Ali really didn't dance much against Spinks that night but it would be nice if legend recorded that night as the master's last dance . . . and that he finished it as king of the ball and lived happily ever after.

Hawks lead Cougars by seven

First-place Portland Winter Hawks moved seven points ahead of runner-up Victoria Cougars in the Western Division of the Western Hockey League by clubbing Seattle Breakers 10-2 in the lone Monday contest.

Cougars have a chance to cut that lead while facing Saskatoon Blades tonight at 8 in Memorial Arena.

Blades, who have won nine of their last 14 games and hold down sixth place in the Eastern Division, are expected to give the Victoria club a tough test.

Tim Tookey scored three goals and added two assists to power Portland to victory in Seattle.

Allan Graves scored his 39th goal of the season at 4:41 of the first period to give Seattle the early lead but Tookey brought the Hawks even three minutes later with his first goal.

Jim Dobson added two more markers and John Multan and Florent Robidoux scored singles to give Portland a hefty 5-1 lead after 20 minutes.

Tookey added another in each of the second and third periods as Portland clearly dominated play, outshooting Seattle 35-22. Brian Shaw, Darren Wankovsky and Ed Cooper completed the Portland scoring while Tom Marsh was Seattle's other marksman.

In Calgary the same day, WHL president David Descent announced his resignation, citing personal reasons and a desire to pursue a new career in private business.

In a release, Descent said his resignation was effective immediately.

WHL board chairman Brian Shaw said he was surprised by Descent's decision but said he wanted to thank him for his efforts and wish him well in his new career.

Shaw said the management committee of the league would meet immediately to decide how to run the WHL for the balance of the season and playoffs. He said a search for a replacement would probably not commence until the completion of the Memorial Cup Canadian junior hockey championship in May.

Jockey Donald Pierce says he's getting mighty tired of looking at a horse's backside.

Pierce rides Flying Paster, and Flying Paster has finished behind Spectacular Bid in his last six outings, the last four in second place.

"I don't think there's any way my colt is going to beat that dude," said Pierce after Spectacular Bid won the $350,000 Santa Anita Handicap on Sunday. "I'm a little tired of looking at his rear. The only way anyone will beat him is to tie an anchor on him."

Spectacular Bid won by five lengths in the 1¼-mile 43rd renewal of the Santa Anita Handicap, the first race ever to offer $100,000.

"I tried to hook him a little earlier today, but it didn't seem to make much difference," said Pierce, a veteran jockey who has won the race four times.

Flying Paster and Pierce rallied outside Spectacular Bid on the final turn but just could not keep pace with the four-year-old son of Bold Bidder down the stretch as the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes winner clocked 2:00 3-5 over a sloppy track in the rain.

With no show betting, Spectacular Bid returned $2.60 and $2.10 and Flying Paster paid $2.10. The $5 exacta of Spectacular Bid and Flying Paster paid $9.

Because California law requires a five-per-cent return on an in-the-money wager, Santa Anita lost $36,453.10 on the place betting.

"This has to be his fourth or fifth greatest race," said trainer Bud Delp. "We had a little weight to beat today and Paster and we did both."

Spectacular Bid, becoming thoroughbred's second $2 million horse, carried 130 pounds, the highest of his career, while Paster was in at 123 pounds. Beau's Eagle, who finished third, carried 122.

"He overwhelmed his opposition," said Delp. "He's not a big horse in size, but he's tremendous in all other ways."

Delp said he planned to keep Spectacular Bid in California for the Californian and Gold Cup at Hollywood Park, possibly run him in Chicago, the Whitney in Saratoga and the Marlboro, Woodward and Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont. The Bid has won 21 of 25 lifetime starts.

Saanich Braves win opener

Saanich Braves, sparked by a three-goal output from Tracy Patterson, tripped Juan de Fuca Gulls 9-3 Monday in the opener of a best-of-three South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League playoff semi-final series at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Shawn Connors, Bruce Tuck, Scott Connors, Marty Irvine, Ian McLean and Ron Brooks scored the other Saanich goals while Dave Kjolberg, Ian Fraser and Ross Anderson replied for Gulls.

The second game of the series is scheduled for 7:30 tonight at Pearkes Arena.

Morgan sparks Ivy's win

Strathcona Ivy's grabbed a share of second place in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League by tripping Western Equipment Juniors 82-73 Monday at Central Junior High School.

Dave Morgan set the pace for Strathcona with 26 points and Ian Scott added 23. Wayne Russell was the top gun for Juniors with 22.

In senior "C" play, Mike Squire sank 35 points as Victoria Rangers bombed Trilec, 111-53.

Vikettes in swim meet

UVic Vikettes — represented by four competitors — will compete in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union swimming championships Friday through Sunday at Lavalle University in Quebec City.

The foursome, made up of Janet Rushcall, Alison Noble, Kathy Rushcall and Judy Newman, is ranked No. 1 nationally in the 400 and 800-metre freestyle relays.

Bays lead south reps

Oak Bay Bays lead the southern contingent into the Vancouver Island junior high school boys' basketball championship in Duncan.

Bays, who now have a 44-5 over-all record for the season, collected the No. 1 berth and the Greater Victoria title with a 52-40 decision over Colquitz in the championship tournament final last weekend.

Colquitz is No. 2 from the south while Lansdowne is third. Other teams competing in the two-day tourney which starts Friday are Belmont, Quamichan, Port Alberni, John Barsby and Woodlands of Nanaimo.

Lifetime contract

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia '76ers will offer a lifetime contract to Julius Erving at the conclusion of the 1979-80 National Basketball Association season, The Bulletin has reported in a copyrighted story.

Erving, the '76er's captain and one of the league's premier players, joined the club in the fall of 1976, signing a six-year contract at an estimated $600,000 a season.

Sometimes a great notion needs help getting in motion.

Does your organization qualify?

Established, non-profit organizations and local governments may qualify to receive financial assistance to hire students.

What projects should you consider?

To qualify, projects should employ at least three students for six to 18 weeks between the 5th of May and the 5th of September. Proposals must be of benefit to student participants and should be of lasting value to the community.

What students will be employed?

Post-secondary or secondary students intending to return to school in the fall, who are Canadian citizens or permanent residents are eligible.

The Summer Youth Employment Program will make a contribution towards wages at the level of the provincial minimum wage. In addition, the Program contributes employee benefits and up to $20. per person per week to cover project overhead costs.

IF YOUR ORGANIZATION HAS A PROJECT WORTH DOING THIS SUMMER, THE SUMMER YOUTH EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM WILL HELP PAY FOR STUDENTS TO HELP GET IT DONE.

Where do you go from here?

Information and project proposal application forms are available at Canada Employment Centres or Employment Development Branch offices.

Deadline for project proposals is March 28.

To receive financial assistance to hire students, proposals must be submitted (post-marked) no later than March 28. Of course, it is to your organization's advantage to submit its application as early as possible, but March 28 is the final deadline. Now's the time to get that summer project off the ground.

Vikettes start against Pandas

University of Victoria Vikettes arrive in Halifax today with visions of a first Canadian intercollegiate women's basketball title dancing in their heads.

Vikettes, who collected the Canada West University Athletic Association championship on home boards last last weekend, have reached the nationals several times but have never won the crown.

But reaching that desired end might not be easy, despite being ranked No. 1 in Canada and boasting a 19-1 record in conference games and a 38-1 over-all mark.

Four of the other teams in the tourney have unbeaten records in conference play. Guelph Gryphons and Bishops Gaiters are 12-0 while Winnipeg Lady Wesmen and Dalhousie Tigers are 16-0.

Vikettes, who face Alberta Pandas in their opening game Thursday, have beaten two of the teams in tournament play this season. The UVic club topped Gryphons by 20 points in the Queen City Classic in Regina and bombed Dalhousie by the same margin in the same tournament's final.

Laurentian Vees, who have taken the national title five straight times, are weaker this year despite a 10-2 conference record. Vikettes beat the defending champions by 35 points in their only meeting this season.

Whitecaps riding stormy waters

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps are navigating troubled off-season waters that are getting stormier for the North American Soccer League champions.

"We're having growing pains and we're guilty of some poor timing," club president John Best said Saturday in a telephone interview from London. "But we will not be blackmailed by anyone."

This was his response to the sale Thursday of goalie Phil Parkes to Chicago Sting, confirmation of plans to trade defender John Craven, who is also the club's player representative, and the sudden firing Friday of Josh Keller, the team's public relations man.

Best also confirmed a leak that he wants to resign from the club's day-to-day operations.

Parkes, who led the NASL in goals-against average for the last two seasons and was an all-star last year, had accused the club of refusing to negotiate.

Best said that Parkes, 32, wanted too much — $750,000 over three years in a contract with a no-cut, no-trade clause; $6,000 annually for accommodation; a car; two months' vacation; four return-trip airline tickets to London each year; six types of insurance coverage and a testimonial game at the end of the contract with all proceeds going to the goalie.

"The total package would have cost us $950,000," said Best. "When I told the lawyer (Joel Shain of New Jersey) that was ridiculous, he said nothing less than six figures per year would be of any interest."

Craven, the anchorman on the Whitecaps' defence, said he thought he was being groomed to become an assistant to coach Bob McNab when his playing days are over. Now, he doesn't know where he'll be playing.

Interviewed before the club's North American contingent headed to England to begin training, Craven said four or five teams would be interested in him.

Best said the club had approached Craven about a management-coaching position with the Whitecaps but "Bob McNab does not want an assistant coach and I do not want John Craven in a management position."

"That is a collective decision of the board, but I take full responsibility for it.

"The timing was very bad," Best said of the admission the club is trying to trade Craven, "but don't forget, we didn't release the story that we were trying to trade him. They did, he and his lawyer.

Best also accused Craven, as player representative, to allow a situation to develop whereby if Best held a meeting with the players and a lawyer to discuss local problems, he could be accused of strike-breaking by the NASL Players Association.

"John was the player rep and he let that happen. He and Jon Sammels came to me after Soccer Bowl and asked for bonuses for the players. I said no, they were illegal. I also reminded both of them that the club policy was to reward effort, because both their contracts had been ripped up in the first year and redesigned.

"But at a social function he went over my head and over (manager) Tony Waiters' head and complained to the directors about no bonuses. Right now — and I stress right now — I don't consider him management material."

He said Keller's firing resulted from a conflict over the PR man's future role with the club and that decision was made by Dave Golinsky, vice-president in charge of operations.

"I argue with the timing. It couldn't have been worse. But I can't argue with the decision."

On his own status, Best said he submitted a resignation from the club's day-to-day operation so he could devote more time to other business activities.

"What upsets me is that the only people who knew about it were the board members at the meeting. That means one of our own board members is leaking information. That's not a good situation.

"The club is at a difficult stage. All the standards are going up. Business has to be conducted differently because of volume. We want to be good employers, and players naturally will try to take a negotiating advantage from a championship year. We expect that. But we will not be blackmailed and we will take a dim view of anyone who tries it."

And while the Whitecaps have been talking about trading players — striker Kevin Hector and midfielder Alan Ball, the catalyst of the Vancouver attack last season have also been mentioned by the media here — they are giving the roster a new look.

On the day Parkes was dealt to the Sting, the 'Caps purchased striker David Robb, a Soctish international, from Philadelphia Fury where he was fourth in NASL scoring last year with 16 goals and 22 assists.

Scottish international to play goal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Scottish international David Harvey has signed a North American Soccer League contract to play goalkeeper for Vancouver Whitecaps, the NASL team announced today.

The Whitecaps said Harvey signed a three-year agreement and will play for Vancouver in an exhibition game Wednesday night in northern England against his former team-mates from Leeds United of the English first division.

Harvey, 32, replaces controversial Phil Parkes, the NASL's leading goalkeeper the last two years. He was traded Thursday to Chicago Sting after a contractual dispute with the Whitecaps.

Harvey is a 17-year veteran with Leeds and all proceeds from the match against the Whitecaps, who are training in England for two weeks, will go to the goalkeeper. He has played 267 times for Leeds and on 16 occasions has represented his native Scotland in international competition.

Speaker's ruling sought on wiretapping of MLAs

By JAKE BANKY

The cabinet minister whose home and offices were bugged by the RCMP for more than a year has asked Speaker Harvey Schroeder to rule whether wiretaps constitute a breach of parliamentary privilege.

Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen told the house Monday he knew nothing of the matter until he was advised by a brief letter Feb. 22, 1979, that a judge had authorized interception of his private communications.

If the speaker finds there was a breach of privilege, Nielsen said he will ask the house to establish a special committee on privileges to consider the matter.

Schroeder promised to bring back a ruling as quickly as possible.

In an interview afterwards, Nielsen said his main concern is to find out exactly what privileges members have.

"I think a lot of elected representatives feel they do have certain unstated or traditional privileges. I would like to have them clearly defined and understood. Then at least we'll know what the ground rules are."

The bugging of Nielsen's telephones was carried out by RCMP seeking evidence in an alleged bribery conspiracy. Nielsen himself was in no way implicated.

The minister has remained silent on the matter because the case was before the court. Now, however, he admits his anger.

"The anger I felt over a year ago is still with me to some degree," he said.

"I'm not comfortable on the phone any more and I probably never will be. I'm very wary of the telephone. Maybe it's wrong, maybe it's paranoia, but I presume that it's being monitored."

He said he has heard from several members on both sides of the house who are upset at the possibility that their telephones might be tapped. The public is also upset, he said, because they feel if a cabinet minister can be bugged, what hope is there for them?

The minister is particularly bothered by the fact that there was a "room monitor" installed in his Richmond constituency office.

"I've had people come into my office with a very personal problem. They thought they were talking in complete confidentiality. What will be the attitude now of people who talk to their MLAs?"

Nielsen does not condemn police use of wiretaps. "The police are handicapped enough in a lot of their investigations by procedures and prohibitions, so I don't argue the point."

Nevertheless, the implications are disturbing, he said. "If you are legally monitoring conversations and you pick up an aside from someone, and use that as a springboard to a new area, and so on, it's difficult to be objective."

At present, Nielsen said, the law permits only one exemption to police wiretaps — communications between a lawyer and his client, but only as long as the lawyer himself is not under suspicion.

He suggested that type of exemption, with the same limitation, might be considered for elected representatives, at least for their offices within the legislative precinct.

Waffle-waving SC sets NDP laughing

Socred MLA Peter Hyndman is waving a red flag but the NDP bull is refusing to charge.

Hyndman gave notice Monday he intends to present a motion in the legislature that the House and each individual member of it reject the Waffle Manifesto.

Hyndman's motion is in deadly earnest but NDP MLAs are laughing it off.

"It's a joke to which we are replying with another joke," said Victoria NDP member Charles Barber.

Barber will serve a counter-motion, "that this House and each individual member of it reject the eccentric A plus B monetary theories of Major Douglas and his successors in government."

For latecomers to this political sideshow, the Waffle Manifesto is a statement of philosophy espoused by radical New Democrats a decade ago while Major Douglas was an early Social Credit guru and an exponent of what became known as "funny money."

Barber said Hyndman forgets to mention that the Waffle Group was driven out of the party ten years ago.

"They never were much of an influence and they have absolutely zero influence today," he said.

However Hyndman argued: "Citizens are entitled to a clear definition of where the two parties stand. I, for one, am a little puzzled as to whether the NDP are socialists any more or whether they're trying to be something else.

"I think this debate would let the people of B.C. have a fresh look at just what the policy and philosophy differences of the two parties are."

If the opposition just takes a negative approach during the session, he said, the people won't have a real chance to see where they stand.

"A debate on the old Waffle Manifesto would indicate where the NDP is in 1980."

Barber replied: "If he wants to talk about absolutely irrelevant and laughable material like the so-called Waffle Manifesto, we than will debate a motion on the eccentric monetary theories of Major Douglas and his successors in government.

"It should be a very amusing debate. No doubt at the end of it Mr. Hyndman will regret he ever opened the subject."

Pension trading plan praised

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber says he's pleased with the government's changed position regarding the need for a reciprocal social security agreement between the U.K. and Canada.

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe has given notice of motion in the legislature pledging the support of the Legislative Assembly to the Canadian and British governments in securing fair play for pensioners.

"Strangely, this motion is virtually identical to one I presented last year," Barber said. "At that time, Hugh Curtis refused his government's support for it. This year, the government now supports this New Democrat policy.

"Regardless of the government's motives at this time, I congratulate Mr. Wolfe for his motion. It will win the unanimous support of the Official Opposition," Barber pledged.

Williams under attack

The NDP opened its spring campaign against the government Monday with a three-way attack on Attorney-General Allan Williams.

In the first question period of the new session, New Democrats Alex Macdonald, Stuart Leggatt and Gary Lauk — all lawyers — peppered Williams with questions about the exoneration of Socred Backbencher Bill Ritchie.

Ritchie was cleared of influence-peddling allegations despite recommendations from the RCMP and regional crown counsel that charges be laid.

The opposition questions were designed to draw a connection between Williams and the decision made by McDiarmid. Williams fended off the volley by taking most of the questions on notice.

The NDP's new team approach appeared, on first viewing, to bring a new vitality to the question period.

However it wavered when Lauk stated solemnly that since Williams had no answers, question period would be terminated.

While government members hooted and jeered, Speaker Harvey Schroeder pointed out that question period is terminated by the bell and not by the opposition.

No interference in courts

There has been no political interference in the judicial system and the government is taking steps to ensure that it does not happen, Attorney-General Allan Williams said Monday.

Williams was commenting on a report by Mr. Justice Peter Seaton which found that the attorney-general's ministry has too much influence over provincial courts.

Seaton was asked to carry out an investigation into the conduct of deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel after provincial court judge Phil Govan of the Richmond Family Court complained someone in the attorney-general's ministry was trying to get him transferred.

Judge Govan had ruled the B.C. government did not have the constitutional power to enact the B.C. Family Relations Act.

The B.C. Court of Appeal judge found that Vogel's conduct had been inappropriate, but there was no evidence of sinister conduct or improper motive.

Williams said Seaton expressed concern that the clerks and administrators who are in daily contact with judges might hear things that they would pass on to their superiors which could influence the conduct of government lawyers.

"We find on examination that hasn't occurred, but because there is a danger — we're taking steps to ensure that it doesn't occur," he said in an interview.

This means that if a clerk hears something in the judges' chambers, he must not to go and discuss it with his superiors because it might eventually get back to senior officials in the attorney-general's ministry and may deal with matters in which the Crown is directly involved.

Williams told the legislature that on receiving the Seaton report, ministry officials undertook an extensive examination of the manner in which support services have been provided, and found the highest standard of service possible is being provided.

Before the judge

Judge Lorne Pearce denied bail Monday in Victoria provincial court to a 19-year-old View Royal man.

Donald James Jorgensen, 1 Woodville Place, was remanded in custody until his trial after defence lawyer Ted Hanman elected trial by judge without jury and waived Jorgensen's right to a preliminary hearing.

Jorgensen is charged with 19-year-old Donald Paul Mills, 843 Esquimalt, with breaking into Budget Rent-A-Car, 1721 Old Island Highway, and Millstream Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, 1730 Old Island Highway, Saturday.

Mills, who is also charged with mischief causing wilful damage to a truck from Budget, was released on his undertaking to appear and was remanded until next Monday for election of his trial method.

Hanman also elected trial by judge without jury for Jorgensen, who was released on $1,000 surety bail last Tuesday, on eight counts of breaking and entering and one count of possession of stolen property and also waived the preliminary hearing on those charges.

Judge Harold Alder handed out a 14-day jail sentence to a 20-year-old Victoria man after finding him guilty of impaired driving.

Mark Alan McLaren, 1977 Fairfield, was charged with impaired driving and driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Oct. 7.

Victoria police were called to investigate a car on a boulevard in the 1700-block Ross and found McLaren lying on the front seat with the key in the ignition.

Crown counsel Clinton Kittle told the court McLaren was convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 May 29, 1979, in Calgary and fined $250.

Pearce imposed a $200 fine on a 19-year-old who pleaded guilty to public mischief.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said Colwood RCMP, operating a radar unit about 8 p.m., Jan. 24, stopped Christopher Hugh John Keays, 1466 Rockland, because he was speeding.

When asked for his driver's licence, Keays said he left his wallet at home. He then gave his employer's name and produced a Budget Rent-A-Car receipt and was given a 24-hour roadside suspension under that name.

About 4½ hours later, Keays' employer went to the RCMP detachment in Colwood and said he was told about the incident.

Police then went to Keays' residence, where he admitted giving the false identification.

Fined $450 for impaired driving was John Philip Hughes, 24, of 1204 Yates.

More use of Y camp is aim

The new outdoor education director for the Victoria YM-YWCA will try to introduce year-round use of 1,000-acre Camp Thunderbird at Glinz Lake.

Jim Leggat, 26, was director of the Winnipeg Y's Camp Stephens for three years and has 11 years experience in Y camping activities.

Leggat will use a task force study commissioned by the Victoria Y to make more use of Thunderbird, and to develop other year-round outdoor opportunities on Vancouver Island.

Leggat has been active in national and provincial associations, serving as Canoe Travel Task Force chairman for the Canadian Recreational Canoeing Association and as chairman of the Manitoba Recreational Canoeing Association.

Insanity appeal upheld

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada said Monday it agreed with the B.C. Court of Appeals that Guy Barnier of Vancouver was not guilty of murder by reason of insanity.

Barnier was found guilty of the shooting death of Dorreen Garbutt. Barnier's lawyers admitted their client shot the woman but raised the defence of insanity.

The only evidence of any contact between Barnier and his victim was that she was the office manager where he was employed and she, in the course of her job, signed the letter firing him.

His conviction was appealed to the B.C. Court of Appeal, which said the trial judge misdirected the jury on the defence of insanity. The Court of Appeal reversed the verdict to not guilty.

Second tuna appeal planned

A second B.C. Supreme Court appeal is to be launched in Victoria on behalf of U.S. tuna fishermen charged last summer with violating Canada's territorial waters.

Robert Higinbotham, who belongs to the Victoria law firm of Owen-Flood, Cox, Turnham, Green and Higinbotham, representing a total of 19 Americans on the fishing charges, said Monday he will appeal the decision handed down in Vancouver last Friday by Mr. Justice Kenneth Meredith.

Higinbotham's original appeal was launched late last year on behalf of the 11 fishermen facing the charges in Vancouver provincial court.

The remaining eight, whose arrests preceded their counterparts' in Vancouver, appeared in Victoria provincial court where bail was set and a trial date of March 19 was finally set.

The Vancouver trial of the 11 was rescheduled for Wednesday but has now been adjourned indefinitely. The Victoria trial is also likely to be postponed while the second appeal is being heard.

Mr. Justice Meredith threw out Higinbotham's claims that the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, which set out a 320-kilometre (200-mile) fishing limit was beyond the power or capacity of the government because the legislation infringes on international law.

Higinbotham also argued that if the legislation applies, the courts have no jurisdiction to act because the act is not clear enough in its terms.

But Mr. Justice Meredith ruled that domestic courts must apply domestic laws over international laws and, on the second premise, the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act incorporated Section 681 of the Canada Shipping Act, which gives the courts jurisdiction, "even if it (the court) was dragged in."

Higinbotham told Vancouver provincial court judge Kerry Smith that while Canada might want a 320-kilometre fishing zone, Parliament had no authority to patrol foreign vessels beyond the 20-kilometre (12-mile) limit established by the Geneva Convention.

THE OPTICAL DEPT.
OF LONDON DRUGS

An open letter to purchasers of eyeglasses and contact lenses.

It was just one year ago this month that Canadians learned the results of a federal study, carried out by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, which investigated competition at all levels of the optical industry in this country.

This long-awaited report, entitled "The Ophthalmic Products Industry in Canada," contained a broad survey of competition at all levels of the optical industry–manufacturing, wholesaling and the dispensing or retailing of eyewear.

The majority of the recommendations, if implemented, would increase competition by breaking up the influence currently being wielded by several large optical companies operating in the retail eyeglass and contact lens field in Canada.

One of the main conclusions of the report was that this domination of the eyeglass and contact lens industry discourages price competition which would be of benefit to consumers.

We at the Optical Department of London Drugs feel very strongly that competition in the optical industry is healthy. Consumers must be offered a choice in terms of price and a choice in terms of style when they go to buy eyeglasses.

Just as important, not only must consumers be offered these choices, they must be well-informed about the options available to them.

The Optical Department of London Drugs has long advocated price advertising for eyeglasses and contact lenses. Price advertising is still not permitted in many parts of Canada. In British Columbia, consumers are fortunate that price advertising is allowed, although unrestricted advertising does bring with it the danger that unscrupulous optical outlets may engage in bait and switch tactics after initially advertising very low frame prices.

We believe that optical companies owe it to the public to ensure that they provide as much information as they can to allow consumers to be well-informed when they buy eyeglasses or contact lenses.

Not only do we state our prices clearly and completely in all our advertising, we also include our customer guarantees. We have two main guarantees, and we stand behind them all the way. If you or your doctor are not completely satisfied with your lenses and you return your glasses within 60 days, we'll ensure that things are set right. We also guarantee every pair of glasses we sell. If your frames or impact-resistant lenses should break within the first year, we guarantee to repair them or replace them at no extra charge.

Another recommendation of the report was that consumers should be made aware that their prescription belongs to them and that they can have it fitted by the optical dispenser of their choice. We support this recommendation most strongly and have long advertised the fact that prescriptions are the property of the patient. The patient should be able to shop around before deciding where to purchase eyeglasses or contact lenses.

Open and complete price advertising...competition in the optical industry...clearly stated customer guarantees...these are some of the basic consumer rights which we believe every person who shops for eyeglasses or contact lenses is entitled to expect.

We are proud that the Optical Department of London Drugs has been a forerunner in British Columbia in ensuring that shoppers can feel confident that, when they purchase eyeglasses or contact lenses from any of our outlets throughout the province, these basic consumer rights are being respected.

Our customers know exactly what they are buying–before they commit themselves–and they know we stand behind every pair of eyeglasses or contact lenses we sell.

BBC slashes jobs in economy move

LONDON (UPI) — The British Broadcasting Corp. is eliminating 1,500 jobs, disbanding five of its 11 symphony orchestras and taking a radio soap opera off the air to save $300 million.

"We cannot economize without causing some pain," Ian Trethowan, the BBC's Director General, said. "There is, I'm afraid, no way we can cut this kind of money without losing jobs."

The reductions — announced in a letter to the BBC's 28,000 radio and television staffers — are part of a trend by Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government to cut spending drastically.

Aside from the job cuts, the BBC said it will eliminate funding for the Scottish Symphony Orchestra, the Northern Ireland Orchestra and three network orchestras.

BBC's Radio 3, one of four domestic radio networks, will be forced to close down at 11:15 p.m. and its educational programs will be reduced by 10 percent.

But the BBC's prestigious news department will be spared the brunt of the cutbacks. Trethowan said only $250,000 of the money-saving moves will be in news.

Hot Tin Roof season best for Bastion

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Take a good, finely constructed play, furnish it with a competent cast and the result is likely to be hard to beat.

Bastion Theatre has only one more play in this season's line-up, but however good and effective Canadian playwright David French's Jitters may turn out to be, the current production of Tennessee Williams' Cat On a Hot Tin Roof is likely to remain the artistic highlight of their season.

To begin with, the play is a masterpiece of the same order as O'Neill's Long Day's Journey into Night. Many writers have considered it Williams' greatest work.

Like a classic Greek tragedy it is high in the kind of melodrama that, lacking the literary genius of Williams and O'Neill, becomes simple soap.

Who, for example, but someone with the genius of Williams could get away with pages of opening exposition spoken by one person in what amounts to a dramatic monologue?

Who but Williams or someone akin to him such as Lillian Hellman, could fill the stage with family hatreds and in doing so create out of the tensions compelling entertainment?

In essence, it's a play about the evasions and pretences that grow, multiplying until they have smothered what is real and true in life.

There is Maggie the cat's frustrated sexual desire and threatened status; her husband's corrosive contempt. There is jealousy, acquisitiveness, approaching death, all played out against the hollow festivities of a birthday party.

Ron Ulrich who directs this Bastion production currently at McPherson Playhouse, says in a program note, that he loves the play.

In most aspects it shows. He has cast it with care and gone on to impart his love for it to a group of actors who range from excellent to satisfactory.

Lally Cadeau has a virtuoso role as childless Maggie, caught in an agonizing situation, tortured by her unrequited passion for her husband and the fear that they could be disinherited by the fruitful brother and sister-in-law.

She is magnificent in the long opening scene, her solo punctuated only now and then by bitter monosyllabic comments from husband Brick.

Tall, graceful as any feline, she prowls, paces, attempts seduction, rages and coaxes. Not at any moment throughout the play does Maggie become a less than vivid and believable presence in the hands of this talented actress.

Brick is a difficult role because he is confined to silence and monosyllables, his action limited by a broken ankle and to drinking until "something clicks inside my head and I feel peaceful."

The silent retreat from all relationships persists for two-thirds of the play but Robin Ward projects strongly the raging unhappy disillusioned person behind the stolid mask.

Big Daddy is however, the focal character in the play. It is his birthday that the family — Gooper, wife Mae and five offspring — have assembled to celebrate with acquisitive adulation.

His survival is the big question-mark hanging over all; Big Daddy has recently undergone exploratory surgery. He and wife, Big Mama have been given an optimistic report; his sons, the opposite.

Prominent Canadian actor Henry Beckman interprets the character — coarse, rough-spoken, self-made and proud of it — with great skill, shading it, moulding it, showing us many facets. Big Daddy lives and is horrible, funny, pathetic, cruel and ultimately tragic in this portrayal.

The confrontation scene between himself and his favorite son, Brick, where he finally breaks down the silence, is powerful and very human. At the climax of that scene as he rages against the "mendacity" that surrounds him, he has our sympathy.

Memorable performances by Peggy Mahon and John Krich as Mae and Gooper; Myra Benson effective and affecting as Big Mama and competent support from the rest of the cast, elbows aside the flaws of unreliable accent, a thunderstorm that breaks inexplicably in the foyer, and failure to establish the oppressive heat.

One aspect that is not totally satisfactory is Ed Kotanen's set. It represents Maggie's bedroom and the walls are scrim through which one can at times, according to the lighting, discern the surrounding balcony. This contributes to the awareness that we are looking at a piece of scenery and not a real room in a real house. The device appears to do little to enhance the action.

Poli-sci prof gives UVic talk

Politicians and bureaucrats who control public spending should be at the University of Victoria Thursday to listen to Dr. Aaron Wildavsky.

A University of California (Berkeley) political science professor, Wildavsky is considered an expert in American politics, the U.S. presidency, budgeting, policy analysis and information systems, and he has authored a dozen books, including The Politics of the Budgetary Process.

He will give a free public lecture Thursday in the East-West Lounge of the Student Union building between 10 a.m. and noon and will speak again in room 203 of the Craigdarroch building between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Friday.

College body picks director

OTTAWA (CP) — Allan K. Gillmore, the University of Ottawa's vice-rector for administration, has been appointed executive-director of the Ottawa-based Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada.

Gillmore, whose appointment is effective July 1, is a native of London, Ont., and a graduate of McMaster University in Hamilton, Ont. He succeeds Claude Thibault, who has held the post since 1975.

Official tried halt of critical report

TORONTO (CP) — A senior official of the federal transport department asked investigators to change their report on the 1978 crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet at Cranbrook to make it less critical of the department, documents made public Monday at a hearing on air safety show.

However, the final version of the report was made public unchanged.

The federal government is one of the parties involved in lawsuits arising out of the crash which took 43 lives.

Confidential documents filed with the air safety inquiry show that William McLeish, administrator of the Canadian air transport commission, circulated a memo indicating his displeasure with the findings of the draft report.

"It seems to me that the integrity of the entire air-ground communications system has been brought into question, unjustifiably by (this) conclusion."

Those findings referred to a timing mixup which contributed to the plane landing at Cranbrook while a snowblower was still on the runway. The PWA pilot managed to lift the 737 back into the air and clear the snowblower, but the plane went into a sharp turn and crashed.

Biron now a separatist

QUEBEC (CP) — The long-awaited debate on Quebec's referendum question begins in the national assembly today with speeches by Premier Rene Levesque, Liberal Leader Claude Ryan and Michel Le Moignan, making his maiden speech as leader of the Union Nationale.

Le Moignan became leader of the dwindling UN on Monday when Rodrigue Biron, who led the party out of the wilderness in the 1976 to take 11 seats, stepped down to sit as an independent.

In an emotional address to the assembly, Biron said he was leaving the party because he has decided to vote yes — "yes to Quebec, yes to the future" — in the sovereignty-association referendum.

He recalled the nationalist sentiments of former UN leaders Maurice Duplessis and Daniel Johnson, noting that Johnson once said that if Quebec did not achieve equality in Canada, it would have to separate.

"It is because I am against complete separation that I am saying yes in the referendum," he said.

Biron's resignation from the UN followed a weekend meeting of the party caucus and executive at which he failed to win support for his referendum stand. The party will support a no vote.

Le Moignan, a 60-year-old Roman Catholic priest, represents Gaspe riding. Before his promotion, he sat in the back row of the assembly.

Levesque, with an hour to speak, will call on Quebecers of all political stripes to vote yes, giving his government a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association.

Ryan has served notice that he will propose an amendment to the question, forcing Levesque "to honor his promises" by making clear his goal of an independent Quebec.

Little is known about what Le Moignan will say, except that he will call for a no vote in the spring referendum.

While debate on the question touching Quebec's future ties with the rest of the country begins inside the assembly, civil servants are expected to demonstrate outside over their contract dispute with the government.

Inquiry told of prior 'hotbox' rail incident

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — A CP Rail freight train had to make an emergency stop just west of the site of the Mississauga derailment about two weeks earlier because of the same malfunction believed to be behind the Nov. 10 crash, a federal inquiry heard Monday.

The train had the same engineer, Keith Pruss.

Now in its fifth week, the inquiry has heard that the crash was caused when a journal box housing an axle bearing on a tanker car overheated and caused a wheel to seize.

The similarities came to light during testimony of a CP Rail trainman at the inquiry headed by Mr. Justice Samuel Grange.

Gary Dagelman, 28, said he was in the caboose of CP Rail Train 916 at daybreak when he saw a flash of flame near a wheel 29 cars up toward the head of the train.

The engineer was notified and the train stopped, he said. The flame turned out to be an overheated journal box, or hot box.

Dagelman said that after the train was stopped, he went to the car on foot and found the box in flames.

The fire was extinguished, he said, and the train was moved about a kilometre, where the car was shunted to a siding.

The hot box was detected when the train was near a Mississauga subdivision area about eight kilometres west of the site of the derailment that led to the evacuation of more than 225,000 people.

Like the ill-fated Train 54, Train 916 was bound for Toronto from London, Ont.

A third case of Reye's syndrome

TORONTO (CP) — Doctors at the Hospital for Sick Children have confirmed that a third child at the hospital has Reye's Syndrome, a rare and often fatal condition affecting the brain and liver.

The latest case to be confirmed is that of a 15-year-old girl, a hospital spokesman said Monday. Two other girls, aged two and 14, were found earlier to have the condition.

The latest confirmation means there have been six cases of Reye's Syndrome reported in Ontario this year. There have been no deaths.

Grits duck double-rail promises

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean-Luc Pepin wasted little time Monday as the country's new transport minister to play down Liberal promises of double-tracking the CNR main line between Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Pierre Trudeau's promise to double-track "the entire line of 1,500 miles" to allow CNR capacity to be raised from 25 to 50 trains a day ran into severe criticism during the Feb. 18 general election, but Pepin treated questions from reporters about the promise with a smile and wisecracks.

"I'm very simple-tracked minded about it," was his opening sally. He noted later that reporters seemed to have one-track minds on the subject.

More seriously, he said the CNR already has plans for double-tracking 10 miles of line at Edmonton and another 35 miles at Jasper, Alta.

Pepin, 55, who served as minister of mines, minister of energy and industry minister in former Liberal cabinets, also said the railway had identified bottlenecks on the western route and had plans to solve them.

"It will be my job to see these plans are accelerated," he said.

And Pepin noted that double-tracking the complete segment would be "extremely" costly and there was a need of funds for other projects.

"It will be a job of establishing priorities," he said.

The former university of Ottawa professor and co-chairman of the Task Force on Canadian Unity said one reason he believes he was given the transport portfolio, one of the heaviest in the government, is his known love of public administration.

Hundreds upon hundreds of important decisions had to be made by the transport minister and as quickly as possible.

"For example, I was shown 55 decisions that have to be made by the end of the month," he said.

Pepin said another reason he believes he got the job is that he was liked in Western Canada.

Transportation is very important to the West because of its role in carrying grain to export market, Pepin said.

Cabinet suits Bennett

The cast of veterans in Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet should help B.C. win more agreements with the federal government, Premier Bill Bennett said Monday.

Only one British Columbian — Senator Ray Perrault — was brought into the cabinet by Trudeau. He will act as government house leader in the Senate. No Liberals were elected in B.C. in the Feb. 18 federal election.

Bennett said Perrault, who held the same post in the last Liberal government, has been very supportive in getting B.C. to achieve a record number of agreements when he was part of the former administration.

"So I look forward to working with him again."

The premier also said he doesn't foresee problems dealing with Energy Minister Marc Lalonde on the subject of an export tax on natural gas as suggested by Joe Clark's Progressive Conservative government.

"I think we'll make our views known in a more forceful way. As you know, we have opposed such as tax and will continue to oppose (it)."

John Bulloch, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, said in Vancouver the important thing to notice about the new cabinet is that all the major economic players have a background in small business or a strong interest in domestic industrial development.

"We're going to see a period of resource project development in the next 10 years and the real issue for Canada is whether or not we can develop new industry, new technology and whether we can get benefits in every part of Canada," Bulloch said.

"We've got the right slate of players to make sure that happens. I'm really quite pleased with the package."

Marchand senate speaker

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Jean Marchand, longtime Quebec Liberal, has been named Speaker of the Senate, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau announced Monday.

Marchand, 62, is an old friend of Trudeau's who played a large part in convincing Trudeau to enter federal politics with the Liberals in 1965.

He replaces Allister Grosart of Ontario who was Senate Speaker in the last Parliament.

Long active in union affairs in the province, Marchand was an organizer of the Confederation of Catholic Workers in 1944 and was first president of its successor, the Conferation of National Trade Unions, in 1961.

Mistreatment charges refuted

Charges of overcrowding and mistreatment at the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter in Mill Bay were denied Monday at the annual meeting of the Duncan Society for the Prvention of Cruelty to Animals.

Present and former employees said the attacks on the shelter were unwarranted and they urged people to come and see the shelter for themselves.

Donations to the shelter have dwindled to almost nothing since the recent wave of publicity.

The shelter workers' defence of the shelter was backed by Al Hickey, executive director of the B.C. SPCA, who said he had personally inspected the Good Shepherd facilities.

While some of the buildings are definitely not up to par by most standards, he said he saw no evidence

SPCA officials would also be given legal protection when entering any land, vehicle or premises other than a dwelling to rescue an animal in distress.

Dan Hughes, who runs the SPCA shelter on Herd Road, said the Duncan group handled more than 200 incidents involving animals last year, ranging from wilful abuse and neglect to wildlife.

Local veterinarian Al Longair was elected president.

Longair, who is retained by the Good Shepherd shelter, said one of the Duncan group's most important objectives will be public educataion and involvement. of mistreatment.

Therefore, he added, there are no grounds for criminal charges.

An earlier proposal to have an outside committee, including a veterinarian from outside the Cowichan Valley inspect the shelter is still possible but unlikely, Hickey said.

He told the meeting the SPCA would like to see more pressure put on people who are cruel to animals.

Hickey said the needed pressure would result if society officials had more jurisdiction.

The society hopes the existing SPCA Act will be updated to include a distress provision.

This would give the SPCA power to prosecute in cases of cruelty and would also give SPCA officials the authority to inspect commercial establishments during regular office hours without a warrant.

Alarm trips shopping centre intruder

A silent intruder alarm helped Saanich police nab a thief who broke into three offices in the Royal Oak shopping centre Monday night.

Police said a rock thrown through a front door of the Royal Oak Western Drug Mart triggered the alarm at 9:46 p.m.

The suspect was caught trying to open a locked cabinet containing drugs.

He surrendered without a struggle.

Police subsequently discovered a dentist's office had been entered and some syringes stolen. The department of highways office in a separate building had also been broken into but nothing appeared missing.

A 27-year-old Saanich man was to appear in provincial court today charged with three counts of breaking and entering.

Growing dangers for envoys abroad

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian diplomat abroad can look forward to growing dangers and a changing lifestyle because of spreading crime and terrorism, federal officials say.

One government source said he expects embassies will tighten security, host countries will impose tougher anti-terrorist measures and diplomats will move about less freely. That's because of such incidents as the hostage-takings in Iran and Colombia.

"The life of the diplomat will become even less glamorous and more dangerous," he said.

Already many Canadian embassies look like banks as the government installs bulletproof glass and strengthens security, he said. Canadian diplomats are briefed on basic precautions they should take to avoid trouble.

The external affairs department estimates roughly one-third of international terrorist attacks are on diplomats. That includes bomb blasts, sniper fire and hostage seizures.

In the last 10 years there has been an average of seven diplomatic hostage episodes a year.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald predicted last fall that Iranian-style hostage incidents will increase in the 1980s.

But an external affairs official said this should be placed in perspective. A Canadian diplomat was more likely to be run over by a car or choke over air pollution in a foreign capital than he was to face a hail of bullets.

Terrorists or guerrilla groups generally don't pick on Canadian diplomats.

The last time a Canadian embassy was seized was in 1976 when a group of Lebanese took over the Embassy in Beirut but released the staff unharmed some hours later. The group leader was turned over to police.

But sources say Canadians are sometimes mistaken for U.S. officials, whose country is unpopular in many foreign lands. Anti-Americanism and a general anger against foreigners occasionally leads to attacks on Canadians.

Embassies rely on local governments for protection. There are also international agreements calling for extradition or prosecution of people who attack diplomats.

In trouble spots where the government is unable to ensure protection for embassies, the only alternative is to close down the embassy until the turmoil is over. Canada shut the embassy in Beirut for a short time and has withdrawn embassy staff from Tehran.

The Iron Lady now showbiz

THATCHER
... fodder for the music hall

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is becoming something of a cult figure — the target of cartoonists, the butt of impressionists and even the model of an Iron Lady doll.

The paraphernalia that has sprung up since Mrs. Thatcher took office shows how eager British stores and showbiz people are to cash in on the fame surrounding Europe's first female prime minister.

A British toy company is manufacturing an eight-inch Thatcher doll faithfully reproducing her full-figured body, laquered hairstyle and schoolteacher-ish clothes.

It even comes with a model of the outfit she wore the day of her electoral triumph last year — a blue suit, black pocketbook and pumps.

The doll's wrist bears a tag giving extracts from her victory speech.

The doll retails for about $27.

Just as other politicians have become fodder for comedians, Mrs.Thatcher's marbles-in-the-mouth speech and parlor-perfect looks have given birth to a pair of female impersonators.

One of them, Janet Brown, can pass as the real McCoy when she puts on the prim and proper clothes that Mrs. Thatcher wears. Her imitation is so good, it once fooled a House of Commons guard.

Not only does Miss Brown include Mrs. Thatcher's likeness in a cabaret act, but she has just come out with a record album that is a take-off from one of the prime minister's famous speeches.

The other mimic, Faith Brown, who has her own Saturday night television show on Britain's commercial station, has Mrs. Thatcher turning into a bosomy, scantily dressed Wonder Woman in times of trouble.

The Daily Express tabloid recently illustrated how Mrs. Thatcher's policies are being chipped away by dissension in her cabinet with a cartoon showing Mrs. Thatcher as a topless Venus de Milo — or rather Venus de Downing Street as the pedestal under her said.

As the trusted ministers knocked the arms off the famous statue, the caption exclaimed: "Oops! Let's say the cat did it!"

One of London's left-wing publications, Time Out, transforms Mrs. Thatcher and her cabinet into animals — fat, ugly-looking beasts — and the Opposition Labor party is responsible for a cartoon of Mrs. Thatcher looking like a cross between a witch and a vulture which is the centerpiece of an advertising campaign.

Eric Heffer, chairman of Labor's organization committee, fiercely denied claims that the cartoon was nasty and cruel.

"I think it's rather flattering," he said.

Kissinger calls kept secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court Monday thwarted efforts by news reporters and historians to obtain transcripts of telephone conversations Henry Kissinger had while he was state secretary and White House national security adviser.

By a 5-to-2 vote, the justices ruled that the Freedom of Information Act does not authorize federal courts to order transfer of the notes from the Library of Congress, where they are stored, to the state department for release.

The ruling, however, leaves the state department free to seek return of the documents. It is likely the department will come under some pressure to do so.

Today's decision reversed lower-court rulings that had cleared the way for public access to at least a portion of the transcripts of conversations Kissinger had while state secretary.

Those rulings had barred public release of transcripts made for Kissinger in his job as national security adviser for Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford.

Narrowly interpreting the Freedom of Information Act, a law passed by Congress in 1966 to curtail government secrecy, the court said the state department had not "improperly withheld" the information because it did not have control of it when the requests for release were made.

Kissinger served as national security adviser from 1968 to 1975. In 1973, he was appointed state secretary, a post he held until January, 1977.

Court documents show that some 15,000 pages of transcripts were compiled of Kissinger's state department conversations, and some 17,000 pages during his years at the White House.

Before he left office, Kissinger donated all the transcripts and other papers to the Library of Congress on the condition that they not be made public for 25 years or until five years after his death, whichever comes later.

He did so after the state department's legal adviser concluded that the notes were not government property.

But U.S. District Judge John Smith ruled in late 1977 that the state department transcripts should not have been removed from that agency's custody because they were not Kissinger's property.

Because the transcripts had been produced on government time and by government workers and equipment, Smith ruled that they were public property.

Public release of the notes had been sought in a suit filed by the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, the American Historical Association, the Military Audit Project and nine individuals.

Dear Abby:

My 46-year-old husband is finally fulfilling one of his childhood desires, clarinet lessons. I am pleased that he feels secure enough to pursue this childhood dream, but the noise is unbearable!

Abby, I think parents — not wives — should be responsible for their children's musical education. There is also the matter of footing the bills.

Would it be in bad taste to suggest that my in-laws bear some of the burden? I think they should either pay for their son's clarinet lessons, or provide a place for him to practice. What do you think?

Troubled Clef

Dear Troubles:

Parents have no responsibility for a 46-year-old son who decides to take clarinet lessons. You must be kidding.

Dear Abby:

I am a 15-year-old girl who has a girlfriend my age who confides in me. She has just told me that she wets the bed! She said she started wetting 3½ years ago. She wet the bed for two years straight, then she stopped for a year, and then started in again. Now, instead of washing the sheets every day, she sleeps on a plastic garbage bag with a towel over it, so all she has to wash is the towel.

She is a very heavy sleeper, and she doesn't wake up while she's wetting.

My friend is really desperate. She's tried setting an alarm to wake her up every three hours. She's even stopped drinking liquids at least two hours before bedtime. She's even tried praying. Nothing has helped.

The poor kid can't accept invitations to slumber parties for fear she'll wet. How can I help her?

Her Best Friend

Dear Friend:

Tell her to see a physician for a thorough examination. And if the doctor can't find anything physicially wrong with her, to get a "Wet Alarm." (It is listed on page 359 of the current Sears spring and summer catalogue; number 083057060.) That little life-saver has dried up more wetters (of all ages) than anything I've ever heard of.

Dear Abby:

I have worked for 10 years for the same company. I am going to be married in June and, as you know, wedding invitations are very expensive.

There are 500 people in my department at work, all of whom are located on six floors of the main building.

It has become a custom for each employee who gets married to place an invitation on the bulletin board of each floor. I was told that this was very tacky. Is it?

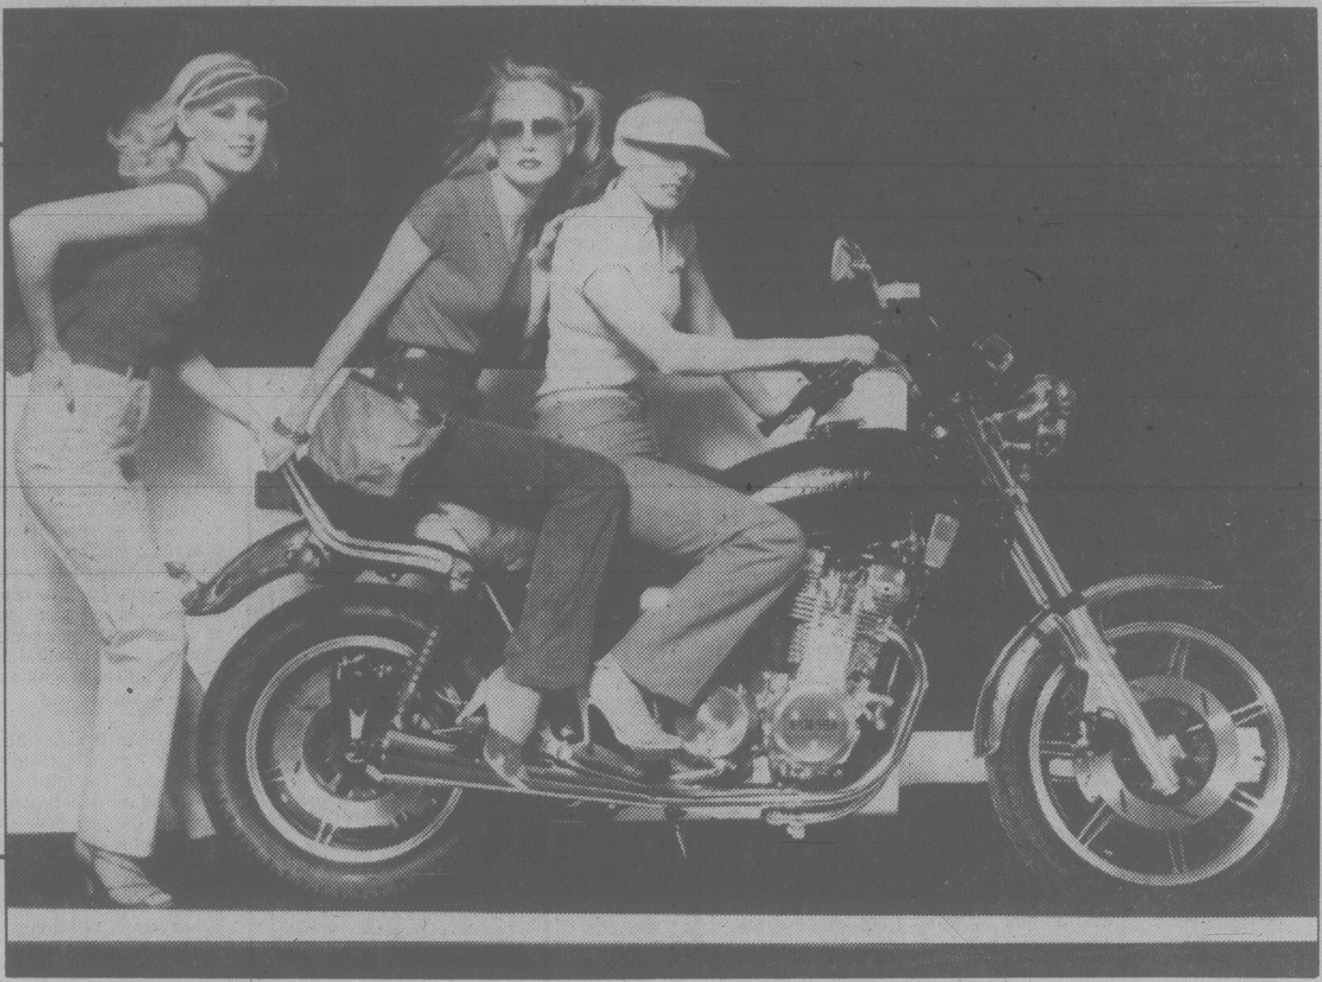
Don't Use Names

Dear Don't:

Tacking up an invitation as a general public announcement for 500 people (most of whom must be strangers) seems tacky to me.

Outlook is bright

T-shirts in bright colors for fun and recreation are expected to be big news for the coming spring season. Brightly-colored cotton jean-styled pants to mix with these brights are also expected to make see broad exposure in area department and specialty clothing stores.



Shape, color signal spring

Spring 1980 . . . the first season of a whole new decade . . . a season when fashion chooses colors, shapes and fabrics that mean new beginnings.

The modern approach to spring '80 is a far-reaching design concept — streamlined design, simple shapes, minimal detail, interesting fabrications and a graphic use of color making the modern approach realistic and applicable to today's lifestyle options for clothes for work, clothes for play and clothes for dressing up.

Here's a rundown on the colors and shapes for spring:

The rectangle shape is the simplest silhouette and the easiest to wear. With the T-shirt dressing rating on top of the list for this season, this shape has to be considered the newest and the most important for spring. It allows free movement but still defines the contour of the body. Since spring '80 is the "Show it off" season we don't doubt the popularity of this shape.

The double triangle shape indicates a definite emphasis on shoulder and waist while keeping the bottom flared. It is a very feminine and easily understandable shape and should be commercially very good. It will continue to be a major look in suits, dresses and coats.

The shape which began last fall in sweater dressing continues to develop and is of major importance with all stretch fabrics. The shape is closer to the body developing the new body consciousness — body shape. It becomes important in jumpsuits, sweater dresses, jackets and sweaters. Stretching the Tee to its limits creates the body shape of maillots and leotards, made popular by the disco scene.

Color, makes a strong statement for spring '80 echoing the light cool and sophisticated expression of the styles themselves. The color mood is either very colorful indeed or very clean and fresh.

Though brights are the key color issue this season, watercolor pales will be seen in top weights, dresses and lingerie. They should be considered as directional and not as a major grouping: pink, light turquoise, lilas, pale yellow, coral.

More powerful than the pales, while not quite as bold as the brights the hot pastel shades give a new enlightenment to solids, stripes, checks and prints. Combined with white, or mixed among themselves they radiate. This season's color story: turquoise, jade, gold, medium purple.

The brights are the stars of the season! Bright full colors come on top, splashing out in single solids, head to toe, or mixing in new, unconventional marriage with everything pitched to create the maximum impact, aiming for stark, hard contrasts that are always surprising, never simply harmonious or tonal. Here again white plays an important role, either as a ground for print, an accent or a dominant part of the outfit: fuschia, deep turquoise, royal, bright yellow, red, bright purple.

The neutral monochromes are the super-cool super civilized shades of the season, six monochromes from a less exotic palette, neutral shades that bring a stabilizing influence and lend themselves to the structured shape of the spring styles . . . mixed together they are classic and sophisticated, in combination with pales, hot pastels or brights, they lighten up to become, new, exciting and daring: steel grey, charcoal, flax, tan, copper, terra cotta.

Work clothes reflect change in business role

BELTS

Best bets for spring — wide and soft and sashed.

Wide (three inch) cinches are also part of this picture.

Newest item — the large sun hat (the bigger the better) in natural straw.

Smaller brimmed straws in all the brights.

Natural straw in men's wear fedora looks and safari shapes.

Cotton salor hat for the natuical look.

JEWELLRY

The neck will be in focus with bare necklines showing beads.

Lengths are coming up to the chokes.

Bangles look great in brights or neutrals — terrific in geometric woods, textured fabric or bright bold plastics.

Earrings . . . buttons are best!

SHOES

Shoes this spring are in one word — colorful.

Pumps — the biggest shoe story continued into spring — slightly barer V-throat, sling back, a little lower heel with more slant and shape.

White is fundamental — to set off the brights.

Look for tri's and bi-colors.

The newest little casual shoe is soft as a ballerina slipper but tied like an oxford — looks great in cotton candy colors.

BAGS

The envelope clutch dominates — with a shorter strap for day tucked neatly inside for evening.

Bags moving away from softness into construction.

Tailored city straws in golden honey tones or brights — especially red — look great as accents.

Woven cotton with leather trim has textured interest.

Neglect won't cure misery of cold

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

It looks as if the upper respiratory infections that seem to plague all of us are going to be around for a while. To some people it may be the "common cold," to others the "flu."

Fortunately, most of these upper respiratory infections subside with a moderate amount of medical attention. Yet, the misery associated with them can be alleviated with some specific measures.

I think it was George Bernard Sh[illegible] said that the ideal way to treat the common cold was "with contempt." Implicit in this typical Shavian jest may lie the possibility of neglect.

No upper respiratory infection should be neglected. Some of them are caused by viruses, such as the flu. Others are caused by bacteria.

Doctors sometimes take throat cultures to determine if the streptococcus germ is the offender. Then specific antibiotics are prescribed.

Viral infections are not affected by the antibiotics. Nevertheless, some doctors use antibiotics in the hope that they will ward off a secondary infection by bacterial invasion.

In the early stage of an infection, people should indulge themselves with bedrest. The aches in the joints and muscles, and the general feeling of exhaustion, can be eased by restriction of activity.

If [illegible] present, aspirin — taken regularly at four- to six-hour intervals around the clock — can be helpful.

If nasal drops are used, they should be used with great care and only for a few days, in order to avoid their habit-forming tendency. Prolonged use of nose drops may lead to persistent congestion of the nose and the so-called "rebound" phenomenon. Then, more and more drops are required to make breathing possible.

The use of steam inhalation is probably the single most important contribution to soothing the irritated lining of the entire bronchial tree. Every family should have a good, stable, non-tippable steam inhalator. It is of extreme value for cases of laryngitis, bronchitis, and chest congestion.

The application of hot compresses to the neck can relieve swollen glands and help make swallowing easier.

The cough [illegible] often associated with these upper respiratory infections very often persists for a long time. They may present a difficult problem. The question always arises as to whether a cough should be suppressed or encouraged. That decision should rest with the doctor.

After an infection is controlled and the fever has subsided, there is a tendency to return to school or to work too quickly.

the collectors

By KEN RICHARDSON

Future historians, instead of poring over massive tomes and complicated data, may content themselves merely with pondering today's vast proliferation of slogan pins typified by the explosive 'sock it to me Pierre' or maybe the more passive, 'I am wet'. The manufacturers turn them out by the hundreds of thousands: so many, in fact, they're willing to pay good money for fresh ideas.

The pin industry is only 70 years old: probably the first pins as we know them were sported in 1896. But in the short span of time since then, the pins have become a major influence in North American life. The political arena alone yields a great harvest for collectors. Simple inducements like 'Vote for Robbins' or the very basic 'Vote YES' are good examples. Brief, often inigmatic, occasionally humorous messages must work — otherwise their use would not be increasing at a steady rate.

By far the most interesting discs were those distributed during the Roaring Twenties; they gave out some remarkably clear clues concerning the society of that era, bent on having a rip-roaring time and the devil take the consequences. Earth-movers like 'any time, where place' and 'Heaven is aloft — see you' and 'Does Mama know you're out?' give some notion of the multi-flavored eyestoppers and conversation pieces. It goes without saying flappers and their johnnies would carry a stock of such pins under lapels on car dashboards or sometimes stacked in pockets.

On the serious side, such colorful symbols certainly have an historic importance and, as collectors, we must always be aware of the impact on coming decades, even centuries, as we now consider artifacts and other tangible associations with these and earlier times.

Where to look? Many dealers tend to specialize in this collectable. Flea markets offer interesting selections. Virtually all outlets can be fruitful.

Buying tips: Be selective; concentrate on a particular activity or time slot. Discerning buys can add depth of appeal to the collection, adding to the ultimate value.

Political campaign pins or buttons can range between $1 and $85. Some types in other fields can be worth up to $110, depending on rarity.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I've been seeing a lot of a girl I met at a disco. We're very much alike — shy and stubborn. At first, I thought that because we're both shy, we don't communicate much with each other. Later I found out her mother had passed away a year ago. I therefore thought that she must be down about this especially around Christmas. My girl doesn't yet know that I know about her mom. It seems that we are drifting apart every time I see her because of this "quietness atmosphere". Should I tell her that I know about everything and comfort her to make things better? I really want her and I don't want to lose what I so far have with her.

Answer: Since you know your girlfriend is going through a difficult time, it would be fair to let her know you understand. It might be that she would like to share with you her feelings about the death of her mother, and your interest could make this possible. If she does not want to talk about it, she can let you know. The quietness between you may be that you are both thinking a lot of things, but for whatever reason, are not sharing with each other.

You are right — she may be feeling depressed by the sadness in her family, and by taking the initiative you can help her express it. I would suggest that you have this discussion at a time when you are both in a quiet place so that if her feelings are strong she will not be embarrassed in public. Even if she does not want to talk about her mother, your caring could be important to her.

Since you are concerned about the "quietness atmosphere" you could discuss that with her — which might be a natural lead-in for her to discuss what is on her mind. I hope you both find a way so you can share with each other, if that is what you both want.

Dear Dr. Levine: I have written to you because I'm going to kill myself. Maybe not right now, but soon. Tonight I sat with 64 pills in my hand for two hours debating whether I should. I decided in favor but my little sister came in and I lost my nerve. I really think I'm cracking up.

I'm good in school, I'm supposedly very funny and happy-go-lucky and I'm told I'm very pretty. But I've been feeling like an 'alien' for over a year now, and I've thought about suicide at least twice a week since Christmas.

Please help me; I'm so unhappy I've got this big ache inside that is there all the time and I've got no one to turn to because no one thinks I'm capable of being serious. I don't enjoy life, I have nothing in common with anybody of my own age — in fact my 'friends' are all seven to 10 years older than I am.

I need someone or something and I'm turning to drugs recently because there's nothing else.

Answer: I know it won't make you feel better that there are many people around your age who feel the same way as you do. But it certainly should make the rest of us very concerned, and even alarmed. You are obviously suffering greatly, but from your letter I get little information about the nature of this "big ache inside". Your misery takes the form of loneliness, a sense of isolation and alientation, but I can't respond to the "why" of your feelings, save for the perception of being different, of having little in common with your peers.

In any event, you would be wise to seek professional help. You can start with your family doctor, school counsellor or minister, or anyone else you trust, to steer you in the direction of the appropriate psycho-therapist. You can visit an adolescent clinic or drop-in centre in your area, and find out who is good (and available) in the field.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I am the 14-year-old girl who wrote you a few months ago. I took your advice and decided not to have sex with my boyfriend. The trouble is, now I'll never get him back. I still hurt so much even after this long. I have met another boy and care for him a lot. He is a little older than I and says he understands how much I still hurt.

This boy says he loves me, and cares a lot about me. He does not pressure me into anything that I don't want to do the way the first boy was trying to do and he does not expect me to have sex with him.

I am mixed up about everything. How can I love one boy so much, and at the same time be attracted to another boy? I cannot get along with my parents anymore, though we used to. I don't think they understand what is happening to me either.

Answer: Let's look first at the good things. It is good that you love, even that you still love the boy you could not accept. Love brings pain, and in this case the pain of separation, probably permanent. But that you have loved him, and still do, means you are a loving and loveable person, and a giving kind of person.

Second, you are happy with your new boyfriend, and you can convert the frustration of your first love into a more mature relationship with someone who is more mature and obviously going to be better for your emotional health.

The bad things in your life at the moment are a by-product of your time of puberty, and of the emotions you have been describing. It is hard for you to get into focus the love you have for boys and relations with your parents. Your relations with your parents are "out of phase" because you are changing from childlike loving of them to grown-up loving of them.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Pegging liar not so tough

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Liars beware. Most people are going to catch you.

People are usually accurate when they think someone's fibbing, said Bella DePaulo, a University of Virginia psychologist who is researching lying.

Subtle changes in eye contact, voice tone, gestures, body movements and energy are the usual tipoffs to a lie, she said.

When somebody's lying, the voice pitch almost invariably rises.

"It would be very obvious to me if I were lying to pay attention to the words I were using, but not to the tone of voice," she said.

"People do think to control their faces, but they seem to be less able to control their voices, or at least think less to do it."

She said studies show people generally can detect a liar when talking with them on the telephone, although most people believe they need to see somebody's face to tell if they are lying.

Owner to sleep best pet cure?

TORONTO (CP)— A dog may be man's best friend, but man isn't necessarily a dog's best friend.

In fact, man may be a dog's worst enemy.

Veterinarians are becoming increasing convinced most behavioral problems in pets are a direct result of problems with their owners. Some veterinarians have even gone so far as to say it would often make more sense to put an owner to sleep because the owner is usually the cause of the pet's problems.

"It's obvious to us that the pet is reflecting the temperamental and emotional environment of its home," says Dr. Chip Coombes of the Eglington Veterinary Facilities Ltd. "People influence their pets the way they influence their children. If an owner is uptight, the pet is uptight. If there are marital difficulties, the animal picks up on the tension."

Vets say that some days they are not animal doctors but animal psychiatrists. While veterinarians might be able to see immediately what's wrong with an animal, they are faced with the difficult task of telling the owner.

"It can be humorous or embarassing to suddenly find yourself in the middle of a domestic dispute, acting like a marriage counsellor," Coombes says. "If a couple is breaking up and the cat takes the wife's side and starts peeing in the husband's shoes, it's hard to say to the guy, 'you should treat your wife better'."

Coombes says he has learned "to look at the human's condition to diagnose the animal's condition."

The University of Guelph's school of veterinary medicine is stepping up its animal behavior lectures in anticipation of an increase in pet psychology.

"At one time there was no such course," says Dr. Donal McKeown, who now teaches the course. "But it's most valuable to vets when you consider prevention is the best cure. If a vet can educate his clients on what and what not to do to their pets emotionally, then half the behavioral problems are solved before they've begun."

Animals can exhibit nervousness — dogs bark, bite and leap, horses kick and chew their stalls and pigs chew each other's tails when closely confined.

What do you have to do to cure a neurotic dog or a behavioral problem in an animal?

"In order to change the animal, you usually have to change the owner," McKeown says.

Locked out, locked in

DES MOINES, Ill. (UPI) — District Judge Ted Miller called on an expert to open the jammed lock on the doors to his chambers.

The revered judge found himself locked outside his chambers along with Loren Wilson, 49, of Kansas City, and his defense attorney, William Kutmus.

Wilson was about to be sentenced for a burglary conviction.

The judge called for a courthouse worker. He tried keys, credit cards and a small drill — but failed to open the door.

"If you don't mind judge," said Kutmus, "I think my client can do this. He has a certain amount of expertise in this."

Miller approved.

"In three seconds he had the door open," Miller said.

The judge thanked Wilson profusely.

"It was nothing at all judge, just professional courtesy," Wilson mumbled.

Minutes later, Miller sentenced Wilson to the maximum sentence — 10 years in the state prison.

Homemade party best

By KAREN ZUMBRUNN
Christian Science Monitor

Children's parties always have been a family affair for us.

At first I resisted giving my children parties, afraid of comparisons with parties with hired clown and magicians. Reluctantly, I gave in. I've learned a lot in the process by talking to teachers, other parents, by reading party books from the public library and by asking my own children about activities they enjoyed or disliked at parties they attended (an hour of outdoor games in raw weather was not a favorite).

Here are some ideas for those who have joined the party-giving club.

First, involve your child in the planning — who to invite and what games to play. Take him to the store to pick out his own paperwear. Having special cups, plates, napkins and perhaps a tablecloth makes your child feel the party really is his. Balloons and streamers create a festive atmosphere.

Second, have a special cake. There is nothing wrong with baking it at home. A beloved baby sitter baked our first party cake, and my son was very excited to see his name written in the icing.

The parent should decide on how many children may be invited. Large numbers at any age can become wild or unmanageable, or else become passive spectators of movies or other entertainment. One girl invited her entire class plus two neighborhood girls, of which my daughter was one, for a total of 20. A few days later she asked my daughter why she hadn't come to her party! One assumes there were so many friends she didn't notice who was there.

We have found that eight, including the host and sibling, works well for age 5 or under, and for our 7-year-old's party we held the number to 10. If the children play a lot with neighborhood youngsters of a similar age, it might be a good idea to invite them so as to avoid hurt feelings.

One feature I never have liked was the big pile of presents to open at the end of the party. At a small gathering, this might invite comparisons of presents, while at a huge double party (35 guests for two brothers), wrappings were torn off and presents tossed in a mound. The boys had no idea who had given what.

A solution that seems to work well for various ages is to open the present when the guest arrives, give a special thank you right then, and then tuck the present out of sight in another room.

Having another adult is a must. Hold the party on the weekend if that is the only time your spouse, a friend or teen-ager can help.

My husband and I gave careful thought to the parties for our 4-year-old daughter and for our 7-year-old son. The first 30 minutes of the two hours for each party was allotted to greeting guests, opening the presents, showing the guest the hosts' room (kids always are curious), playing with the home toys and decorating party bags.

Decorating party bags is a wonderful artistic project for the children. Names are written on bags in advance to save time and confusion. Kids pick various seals and stickers, and use them with their own crayon or pencil drawings on a brown paper bag.

While I was fixing a simple lunch, my husband announced the winners of the party bag decoration contest: most creative, funniest, best use of stickers, most colorful, etc. Having a box of inexpensive small toys and candies for winners to pick from gave each child a choice, and since several other games were played, it was easy to award many prizes so that each child won at least one time.

Honey Recipe of the Month

March: HONEY HAWAIIAN DATE LOAF

¼ cup margarine
½ cup honey (liquid)
1 egg
2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
3 teaspoons baking powder
1-14 oz. can crushed pineapple (drained)
2 teaspoons vanilla
¾ cup chopped dates

Cream margarine and honey together. Add egg and beat well. Sift together flour, salt, soda and baking powder. Add to creamed mixture, alternately with drained pineapple. Mix well. Fold in vanilla and dates.

Pour into a greased 9 inch by 5 inch loaf pan. Bake at 325°F for approximately one hour or until a toothpick inserted in centre comes out clean.
Makes 1 loaf.

Owning shop takes savvy

By ANNE SCHIRO
New York Times

"A lot of people think opening a store means you get to travel to Europe and get your clothes free — it's not anything like that," said Howard Partman, co-owner of San Francisco Clothing and teacher of a course on how to open and run a boutique. He has been giving the course for three years at the midtown campus of the Parsons School of Design.

"When we first opened San Francisco in 1968," Partman said in an interview, "you could take your bar mitzvah money and open a shop if you liked clothes. It was fun. It was a different lifestyle. Now it's a business. You have to be very professional and know what you're doing. You have to be versatile and willing to sacrifice a lot. Running a shop is no 9-to-5 job.

"In 1968 to '71 you could open a store for $5,000 or $10,000. Rents were cheap, and you didn't need fancy fixtures for a jeans shop. To open a 10,000-square-foot store now, you need a minimum of $200,000.

"I bring all this out in the first class so people can withdraw right then if they're not serious."

Some of those who have stayed with the course through all 12 sessions were interviewed for their reactions.

"It convinced me I'm not ready to open a boutique," said Theresa Ritterstein, a young mother who had been interested in opening a children's boutique. "It saved me a lot of time and money."

"I was interested in learning about business law, retail terminology and financing," said Leonard Bess, a designer. "I'm hoping to start my boutique in 1982. I expect to be severely undercapitalized, but I'm a gambler."

Alda Spina, who is freelancing in the wholesale industry, said, "I feel I could open a shop now and would do things differently."

An important part of the course is visits by shop owners, store buyers, legal experts and security people who discuss their specialties.

Doris Blank took the course a year after opening a boutique called Intuition in Armonk, N.Y., and finding that "you can't expect help from someone else who has a shop."

"They get paranoid if you ask questions," she said.

"The course was good for me at that time because there were specifics I wanted to know. I knew what questions to ask. I had been an art dealer before I opened this shop."

Another graduate is Joan Caspi, who four months ago opened a lingerie shop called Wife Mistress on Lexington Avenue near 74th Street.

"I was a psychiatric nurse," she said, "but I'd always been interested in having a boutique. I was in Howard's first class. One of the things he suggested was getting a job in retailing to gain experience. So I went to work at L'Affaire, a lingerie shop downtown. I found that though I could do a dialysis, I couldn't do a Master Charge. I learned a lot by working there.

"Then I had a chance to open a store in Larchmont. I went to Barbara Wagh, the owner of L'Affaire, for advice and she became interested in a partnership. But she was sure the city was a better place for a lingerie shop.

"Howard had said that if you take a partner, make sure it's someone with the same taste you have. Barbara and I buy everything together. We seem to agree on most things."

"We made one mistake, though," Mrs. Caspi added. "We had been taught to focus on one thing. Find your niche and specialize. Don't spread yourself too thin. Well, we thought we could dress a woman from the inside out. But we've already learned that our lingerie was more popular and that selling clothing took too much time and knowledge that we didn't have. So now we'll sell only lingerie and loungewear. And we try to find things you're not going to see in department stores."

'Few would work past 65'

OTTAWA (CP) — The worst that employers would have to put up with if mandatory retirement at age 65 were eliminated is coping with a small number of employees who wish to continue working even though they are no longer as efficient as they were, says a study by the Conference Board in Canada.

In making the report public, James Frank, director of the board's compensation research centre said "the main impact of eliminating mandatory retirement at age 65 would be to reduce the freedom of employers to force retirement on a very small number of less efficient individuals who wish to continue their employment."

Frank said in a statement that eliminating mandatory retirement would have "only a minor influence" on goals such as ensuring the elderly have adequate retirement income, with the independence that this implies, as well as increasing the labor supply and reducing future pressure on the pension system.

The reason why the influence would be so minor is that such a small number of people are involved. The study shows that of each of 100 employees now aged 55 and working for an employer with a pension plan, about 70 per cent will have left by age 65.

A whopping 50 per cent will retire before that age, either through early retirement provisions or for health reasons.

Fifteen per cent will die before age 65 and six per cent will be laid off and not find another job.

This leaves 25 per cent who will retire at age 65 and four per cent who will work beyond that age.

"Consequently, at most 29 per cent of these employees could work past age 65 but, because public pension payments and old age security are received at age 65, the actual percentage who would choose to do so is likely to be even smaller," the study says.

Dr. Leon Koyl, a Toronto specialist on aging, says only 10 per cent of people who retire at age 65 need to because of failing competency. He says many men are capable of working until they are 82 and women until they are 85. Findings like Koyl's are making the question of retirement at 65 a civil rights issue.

"People are living longer and they are able to work," says Dorothy Crittendin, Ontario Human Rights Commission chairman. "There has to be a choice."

Trench foot returns

WORTHINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — Some kids attached to jogging shoes and sneakers are breaking out with the Second World War ailment, trenchfoot, this winter, says the president of the American Podiatry Association.

Dr. William Munsey said trenchfoot is characterized by blistering, redness, and breaks in the skin.

"The name was coined by soldiers in France during the First World War," the foot doctor said.

"It described what happened to their feet from being in cold, wet trenches and not being able to keep warm or dry."

Other current foot miseries stem from the boot-around-the-clock fashion enslaving mostly females of all ages, he said.

Skin withers or conditions develop from lack of air circulation.

The boot syndrome has been seen in school children, college coeds and office workers.

Boots made of synthetic materials, due to perspiration they cause and trap, can also bring on trench-foot symptoms, Munsey said.

"The last two winters doctors have been seeing a lot of kids with this condition. They wear their running shoes or sneaks to school, get feet wet and cold in snow, rain or slush and then sit in school all day without drying out.

"The skin gets to looking like a hand that's been in a rubber glove all day — withered. When the skin dries out fissures and cracks bleed. Infections make it worse."

Early music counts

WILMETTE, Ill (AP) — Music teacher Margaret Dilmore loves to tell the story of a five-year-old student who ran away from home taking only his two most prized possessions — his teddy bear and violin.

A disgruntled prodigy? Not really. Merely an average youngster for whom music is an important part of life, says Dilmore of Chicago.

In fact, she adds, this particular child is one of the "older" students in a string instrument program that has three-year-olds producing recognizable melodies on pint-sized instruments, and loving every minute of it.

The prevailing opinion among music teachers now is that the "right" age for a child to begin music study is as early as possible.

"There is no longer any question about the importance of musical training for young children," says Gene Wenner, president of the American Music Conference.

"Numerous students have proved that children who are exposed to musical concepts at an early age exhibit not only an above average musical proficiency in later years, but also perform better than their peers in academic subjects, mainly reading."

There are about a dozen different methods for introducing pre-schoolers to music, Wenner says.

"Although the approaches may differ, the basic philosophies of these teaching techniques are similar," he says. "They will aim at developing the child's innate musical ability, and they all stress rhythmic development.

"It's the rhythm which helps the children in language skills, vocabulary development and reading."

According to the Suzuki method of instruction used by Dilmore, for example, a young child learns music by "absorption, just as he learns to speak — and the sooner the better."

"When a child is two or three we start training the mother on the violin with the child watching," she said. "We want the child to get excited about playing until he makes the commitment by himself. At age three we start working with the child."

The mother is requested to be present so that she can help the child with his lessons, or to assist in "translating" the teacher's instructions.

"Even toddlers are transfixed by sound and rhythm," Dilmore said. "Sometimes mothers bring the student's younger brothers and sisters to class. When their turn for lessons comes, they learn much more quickly than the others, almost as though the music had already been absorbed into their minds and bodies."

infotel

Once a Canadian child has come safely through the first few critical weeks of life, the greatest threat to life and health is a car accident. The threat is much greater if the child is not protected by the right kind of carrier or car seat.

Here is how to buy and infant "carrier" or car seat:

Choose a car seat suitable for the child's age and weight.

From birth to nine to 12 months your child should be in an infant carrier. In this restraint system, the infant faces rearward, in a semi-reclining position.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	2 ♠

Opening lead — four of spades.

Assume you're declarer in four hearts and West leads the spades four. It's clear that you must lose two spade tricks, so making the contract depends on whether you lose one diamond trick or two.

If West has the king of diamonds, it's easy to hold yourself to one diamond loser by playing low towards the queen. But if East has the king and you play low to the queen, you lose two diamond tricks and go down one.

You should start by making a tentative assessment of which opponent probably has the king. Obviously, East is more likely to have the king than West, because East was the player who entered the bidding.

Your next step is to imagine hands the defenders might have that would allow the contract to be made. Thus, you could mentally assign the singleton or doubleton king of diamonds to East, and then easily manage the play so as to make the contract.

But by far your best chance is to try to force East to lead away from his assumed king of diamonds, since that would solve your problem even if his holding were three to the king.

Accordingly, after East wins the opening spade, lead with the nine and continues with the ace and then the ten of spades, you ruff high. Now, after drawing trumps, you cash the A-K of clubs, ruff a club, and play dummy's last spade, the queen.

Instead of ruffing it, you discard a diamond! This puts East on lead and forces him to return a diamond or yield a ruff and discard. Either way, you make the contract.

As happens so often when you're declarer, you could not feel 100 per cent certain of the ultimate outcome. You had to feel your way at the start and hope everyting would eventually come out all right.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, March 5
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are on brink of extricating yourself from morass of legal complications. One who "owed" you money, services will repay, perhaps with a flourish. A burden is to be lifted. Another Aries and a Libra figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New approach to work, recreation, life style brings surprisingly good results. Stop brooding — and laugh. Be analytical, not a "worry-wart". Love can be a major part of scenario, if you so permit. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emotional responses command more-than-usual attention. Accent on speculation, money that comes as result of quick decisions, personal magnetism, romance. Hunch is on target — know it, heed inner voice. A former teacher is back on scene.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight humor, versatility, confidence in your future. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles. Stick to facts, insist on "hard news." Individual, familar with current market, could become an ally. You are due for "big break."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Exchange ideas, make revisions, build on a more solid base. Individual, with legal background, wants to "take your case". Steer clear of Amateur Night! You receive news which aids in clarifying money situation connected with relative.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Analyze costs. Be aware of budget requirements. Make inquiries. Cycle is such that your questions will be satisfactorily answered. Gemini, another Virgo and a Sagittarian figure in provocative scenario. A member of opposite sex proves valuable ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are "on brink" of striking pay dirt. Know it, be confident, gain cooperation of family members. Accent on home, diplomacy, investments, personal appearances which brings desired results. Taurus, another Libra and a Scorpio figure prominently.

SCORPIO [illegible]: Glamour, mystery, intrigue, clandestine meeting — these dominate a "romantic" scenario. Get rid of superflous material. Streamline procedures, techniques. Answers to vital questions are found by seeking behind the scenes. Message will become increasingly clear.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If playing games, move on. Relationship heats up — pressure and responsibility are due to replace frivolity. Cancer, Capricorn persons play significant roles. Emphasis on desire, friendship that is translated into "serious" affair.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Protect territory. Perceive potential. Reach beyond current expectations. Aries, Libra persons help make this a meaningful scenario. One you aided in past returns favor. You realize that you are going to finish project — on time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fresh approach brings long-range objectives into clear focus. Accent on obtaining necessary means for eventual travel, educational pursuits and special publication. Leo and another Aquarian figure prominently. Avoid lifting heavy objects.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One who taught you in past may now seek your counsel. You get to core of mystery. Money and love dominate scenario. Boredom is replaced by anticipation. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Be cautious in connection with business partnership.

IF MARCH 5 IN YOUR BIRTHDAY you are analytical, perceptive, sensitive, attractive, restless and have a great amount of curiosity. You would make an excellent reporter, photographer, psychologist, character analyst. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. September could be your most memorable month of 1980, a year featuring production, business, financial opportunity and intensified relationship. If single, marriage potential is heightened. If married, there could be an addition to family.

Afghan rebels claim success in face of bombing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Soviet planes bombed towns in eastern Afghanistan's Konar province for the fourth day today, Afghan rebels reported. The rebels said they killed 1,800 Afghan army soldiers in fighting there and in neighboring Nangarhar province.

No confirmation was available for the rebel claims, issued in Islamabad, Pakistan, by the Hizbe Islami, the Islamic party of Afghanistan. The casualty figures were considered much inflated.

"Heavy bombing on different parts of Konar is continuing by the Russian aircraft," said the communique from Hizbe Islami, one of 60 rebel factions fighting the Communist regime that came to power in Afghanistan 23 months ago.

"The Afghan government troops suffered 1,800 dead in fighting at various places over the past three days in the provinces of Konar and Nangarhar," the communique said.

On Monday, the Hizbe Islami rebels said they eliminated an entire Afghan army contingent but did not say how large the unit was. It said the government soldiers were trying to recapture a stretch of the main highway in Nangarhar between Kabul, the Afghan capital, and the Khyber Pass, on the Pakistani border.

Hizbe Islami also said the Russians were using almost 200 tanks, 36 helicopter gunships and a number of MiG-21 and MiG-23 jet fighters to attack almost a dozen towns in Konar, between the snowy mountains of the Hindu Kush and the border of northernmost Pakistan.

In today's report, the rebels said they killed 100 government paratroopers who landed near Bajaur, besieged a "large number" of Afghan soldiers in the Shegal and Asmar areas and repulsed a government attack there by a large number of Afghan soldiers with a large number of tanks and air cover.

On the diplomatic front, Britain's ambassador to Moscow, Curtis Keeble, and two French diplomats — Bruno de Leusse, secretary-general of the foreign ministry, and Gabriel Robin, head of the ministry's political affairs department — met with Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister Georgi Kornienko to discuss a British proposal for neutralization of Afghanistan in conjunction with the withdrawal of the estimated 75,000 soldiers sent into the country.

Rebels hang tough

BOGOTA (AP) — The leftist guerrillas holding U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio and about 26 other hostages in the Dominican Republic's embassy for a week vowed that they will not reduce their demands as they prepared for negotiations with the Colombian government today.

"We won't give in on anything," said the leader of the 30 guerrillas who invaded the embassy during a diplomatic reception last Wednesday. But "we have given no ultimatum," he said in a telephone interview.

One of the guerrillas was killed in the takeover and the leftists have released 23 hostages, including 15 women. Those still held include at least 20 foreign diplomats, two protocol officers from the Colombian foreign ministry and at least four other persons.

The guerrillas, members of an organization called M-19, are demanding $50 million, freedom for 311 other M-19 members they say are under arrest, worldwide publication of an anti-government manifesto and safe conduct out of Colombia.

Leftists beaten back

SAN SALVADOR (UPI) — National Guard units today regained control of large sections of metropolitan San Salvador that were held briefly by guerrillas who attacked the guard's headquarters. Nine people were killed and 14 others wounded in the incident.

Tanks rumbled through the streets of San Salvador as the Central American country recovered from the attack on the barracks late Monday night in the northeastern suburb of Ciudad Delgado.

Scattered bombings were reported throughout the capital and northeastern suburbs, but the offensive staged by the Peoples' Revolutionary Army appeared to have been beaten back, at least temporarily.

Guerrillas held streets in both suburbs much of the night, fighting from behind stone barracades. But by early morning most of them had withdrawn, an army spokesman said.

The leftist offensive Monday night was one of the boldest and bloodiest this year.

Kidnap helper hinted

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — Kenneth Parnell, a lonely ex-convict who police say created a family for himself by kidnapping children, was being arraigned today as police studied the possibility that he had an accomplice in the abduction of Steven Stayner seven years ago.

Parnell, 48, has been charged with the Feb. 14 kidnapping of Timmy Lee White, 5, of Ukiah. He is being held in lieu of $7,000 bail and was to appear [illegible] before Justice James Luther in Ukiah justice court.

The youngster hitchhiked to freedom Saturday with Stayner.

Parnell was convicted in connection with the abduction of an eight-year-old Bakersfield boy in 1951 and served three years in San Quentin prison.

IT TOOK GUTS TO REDESIGN THE WORLD'S BEST SELLING CAR.

Corolla, the best-selling car in the world, offers a whole new feeling. With 9 totally new Corollas, there's new space, performance and choice.

This is the year Corolla offers everything from 2-Door and 4-Door Sedans to a Sport Coupe, 3-Door Liftbacks and 5-Door Wagons.

Corolla 1.8. Redesigned inside and out.

Corolla has been redesigned for 1980. With great care. The wind tunnel testing alone took 425 hours. And extensive rust prevention treatments protect that aerodynamic new shape.

With a new, sleek exterior (and gorgeous interior), there's a whole new sense of wide open space – for you, your crew, and more for your cargo.

Corolla 1.8. All-new car, all-new engine.

Even Corolla's performance is new, due to a new suspension system, longer wheelbase, and peppier 1.8 litre 4-cylinder engine that's easy on gas.

INTRODUCING THE NEW 1980 TOYOTA COROLLA 1.8

5-Door Wagon

3-Door Liftback

1980 Toyota Corolla 1.8
Fuel consumption in miles per gallon.

Urban	Highway	Comparative Rating
32	49	40*

Estimates

*40 m.p.g. equals approximately 7.1 litres per 100 km. Numbers based on laboratory tests of all 1980 Toyota Corollas equipped with 5-speed transmissions using approved Transport Canada test methods. Actual consumption will vary. Urban winter consumption will be significantly greater. Consult the 1980 Transport Canada Guide for details.

And the list of standards is so generous you're bound to be delighted. For example, AM/FM/MPX stereo radio and digital quartz clock are standard on the SR5 Liftback and Sport Coupe.

You get a feeling that in its class the new Corolla outclasses the competition.

Corolla 1.8. Total quality.

At the heart of each of these 9 new models is Toyota economy and quality – the famous Toyota quality that has helped make the Corolla the best-selling car in the world. The 1980 Corolla. Winner and still champion.

210 HOUSES TO RENT UNFURNISHED

VERY SPECIAL!
This exceptionally well-designed cedar-sided home on ⅓ of an acre is a house beyond a fairyland dream. Sitting, like it belongs, as a part of the wooded rustic setting it nests in. Country Broadmead living just minutes from town. Lovely warm rich colors enhance the modern yet family style comfortable warmth of the inside of this home. WxW carpets, double thermo windows with one-inch slant metal, modern venetians (rod-controlled) add to the material airiness (eliminating drapes) and bring outdoor views into everyday living. Unique entrance hall, large exceptionally delightful living room, separate dining room. Kitchen, as of house, beautiful design. Bright and immaculate counter-top Jennair plus built-in oven, built-in microwave, built-in garbage compactor and dishwasher and garburator. Eating area has lots of cupboards. 2-pce. bathroom just off good sized laundry room (with hook ups for appliances). Family room off kitchen with heatilator fireplace. Two delightful bedrooms on main also, plus 4-pce. deluxe bathroom. Double drive-in (automatically controlled doors) garage.
Upstairs — Library with fireplace overlooking living room, special master bedroom, with the ultimate of luxurious bathrooms adjoining. Extra large Jacuzzi bath, separate shower stall, double counter basins and toilet plus built-in sauna. Large sewing room — well plugged, even for phone. The final extras for economically-designed working load — built-in vacuum system — 2 large 60 gal. hot water tanks, electric air-forced heat. Unbelievably, a most unusual and incredibly suitable home for family enjoyment.
No pets please. References required. Owner leaving immediately.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

before me in the
enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

309 IN MEMORIAM

de'AMARAL: In memory of Edward who passed away March 4, 1979.
Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory sad and true.
Just the love and sweet devotion
Of one who thinks of you.
Fondly remembered by the Kowalchuk Family.

KOWALCHUK Cheryl-There is some one who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went,
There is some one who thinks of you always,
And tries to be brave and content.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear;
'Tis sad, but true, we wonder why,
The best are always the first to die.
Peter, Laverne, and Duane.

KOWALCHUK: In loving memory of our grandaughter Cheryl Lynn who passed away March 4, 1979.
If tears would build a stairway,
And heartaches make a lane,
I would walk the path to Heaven
And bring Cheryl home again
But as God calls us one by one
Our [illegible]
Always remembered and sadly missed by; Cheryls' Grandparents, Ray & Margaret Braun.

KOWALCHUK: In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister Cheryl Lynn, who passed away March 4, 1979.
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just, to the end of her days,
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind.
Beautiful memories, she left behind.
Always loved and missed by Dad, Mom, Marianne, Dean and Cindy.

West 'lacks strength'

The political strength Western provinces have experienced in recent years is partly illusory, says a study on Western alienation and economic growth prepared by two B.C. government economists.

"It is clear that the popular perception of Western Canada becoming the focal point of economic and political power in Canada has been somewhat exaggerated," say David Emerson and W. S. Doggett of the provincial finance ministry's policy and planning unit.

The authors of the study released Monday say one reason the West lacks strength is because the region continues to rely on primary resources development for new employment and industrial growth.

The gap between present political myth and future economic reality will not be bridged until the West spends more of its accumulated resource revenue to develop secondary industry, they said.

Tricky weather to predict

The mild temperatures day and night over the last week of February caused a most noticable spurt of growth on many plants, even flowers on the early spireas. It is difficult to realize there are three more weeks before the equinox and the arrival of spring.

March is a tricky month to predict. Memory is fickle but records prove snow to be more frequent in March than in January or February although amounts are usually no more than a dusting.

Over the last seven years we have averaged 8 air frosts and 17 ground frosts during March in the lower areas away from the warming effects of salt water. Air frosts are recorded on thermometers in an approved weather screen at a height of four feet above soil level; ground frosts on a minimum thermometer standing on an area of mown grass from 7 p.m. until 7 a.m.

The gardening schedule for March should be flexible because it will have to be adjusted to suit weather conditions and the amount of moisture in the soil.

The first job to complete is the pruning and feeding of fruit trees as outlined in previous columns. Gooseberries and red currants may also be pruned in March, shortening side growths to 2 buds and reducing last year's tip growths by one half.

Black currants are pruned as the fruit is picked because the shoots which have fruited do not bear a heavy crop again.

Although bush roses are already showing new growth it is best to leave the pruning until the last two weeks of March in gardens adjacent to salt water, and the first two weeks of April in low-lying gardens further inland.

The climbing Jasmine can have flowered shoots removed during periods without frost, but other climbers and ornamental shrubs are pruned according to their flowering periods.

Those which flower before the end of June are pruned after the majorit)y of the flowers have faded. To prune now would remove the flowering wood. Shrubs which flower in summer, from July on, bear their flowers on new shoots made this year, so pruning is done in late March into April in frost-free weather.

Informal hedges of spring flowering shrubs are pruned after the main showing of flower is past. Privet, Lonicera nitida, coniferous and laurel hedges are pruned in late April and August.

The pruning of Clematis varies. The multi-flowered species, the first to flower in spring, can be severely pruned after flowering. These are vigorous growers.

The large flowered hybrid Clematis which bloom from the end of June during summer or fall, can be cut down to within two feet of soil level in late March and will bear their blossoms on new wood at about eye level, four to six feet.

The fertilizing and dressing of lawns is a job for early April. Compost can be put through a half-inch mesh screen at any convenient time ready for the April application.

Hardy vegetables such as leeks, onions, broad beans, parsnip, and early peas can be sown or transplanted as soon as the soil is in a workable condition and not too moist. Other seed sowing will be confined to indoors and in coldframes.

The more weeds that can be pulled the less trouble there will be as the weather improves. A half hour in any period of fine weather will accomplish a lot during the month.

The planting of ornamental trees and shrubs continues if the soil in the garden will not be damaged by working on it. If weather or soil is not suitable for planting when new acquisitions are obtained, leave them outdoors in a sheltered spot until things improve. Never put them under cover or indoors.

Florida shivering

United Press International

Temperatures plunged to crop-killing depths in Florida today, marking the third straight day of freezing weather in parts of the Sunshine State and assuring consumers of higher fruit and vegetable prices.

Sun graced the mid-Atlantic region, allowing residents to venture out for the first time since a weekend storm buried the area in record snows and killed at least 40 people. A new snowstorm brewing in the Rockies threatened to smother parts of Colorado.

A blast of deadly Arctic air swooped into the South, endangering citrus and vegetable crops and producing record low temperatures as far south as Key West, Fla. — the southernmost point in the continental United States.

Temperatures across Florida ranged from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 40s in the southern area.

Record lows were set for the third straight day in Tallahassee, Fla., at 21 degrees, Daytona Beach, Fla., at 28 degrees and Augusta, Ga., at 19 degrees.

Housewives in the Northeast can be certain they'll pay higher prices for fresh vegetables and citrus products into late spring.

Militants resisting Bani-Sadr on visit of hostages by UN

Times News Services

TEHRAN — The militants holding the U.S. embassy in Tehran today refused to allow a UN investigative commission to visit all their hostages until after the commission reports to the world on the alleged crimes of the shah and the United States.

The new conditions imposed by the militants seemed to rule out a meeting between the U.S. hostages and the commission during the five commissioners' current visit to Tehran, expected to end by this weekend. The new stand also set the militants on another collision course with President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

In another development, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh rejected a request by the prosecutor-general that Victor Tomseth, one of three U.S. diplomats in custody at the foreign ministry, be handed over to the revolutionary courts for questioning about alleged links with an Iranian terrorist group.

Ghotbzadeh was quoted as saying revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini will have the final say on whether Tomseth should be turned over to the revolutionary courts.

Tomseth, 38, and two other top U.S. diplomats have been held at the foreign ministry since the Nov. 4 seizure of the embassy by Moslem militants.

As some 50 U.S. embassy hostages began their fifth month in captivity today, Tehran Radio reported that spokesmen for the militants told the foreign ministry a visit to the hostages by the UN commission could only be part of a three-stage plan:

— First, the militants would present the commission with documents proving that some of the hostages were spies.

— The commission could then visit with those hostages and interrogate them as witnesses.

— If the commission, in its report to the United Nations, "manages to convey the will of the brave and oppressed nation of Iran" and to "convince" the world body of U.S. crimes in Iran and wrongdoing by the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, "then a meeting with all the hostages to inquire into their health and conditions will be possible."

Militant representatives presented this plan to Bani-Sadr and four members of the Revolutionary Council at a two-hour meeting Monday night.

A student statement said Bani-Sadr and Ghotbzadeh rejected the militants' proposals as unacceptable and told them their action would weaken the Iranian government.

Meanwhile, U.S. federal officials confirmed today that Reza Razmi, the former head of the shah of Iran's secret police, has been living in Fresno.

BCRIC buying into big ones

20% of Kaiser, 14% of MacBlo eyed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Less than 24 hours after it announced plans to purchase more than 14 per cent of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s common shares, the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. said it has been granted an option to buy a substantial minority position in B.C.-based Kaiser Resources Ltd.

Trading in shares of both Kaiser and BCRIC remained halted four hours after the Toronto Stock Exchange opened at 7 a.m.

Trading in BCRIC shares resumed in Toronto before closing and rose ⅛ to $8¾. At the Vancouver Stock Exchange, BCRIC shares led industrial trading at noon, gaining .22 to $8.85.

BCRIC president David Helliwell said in a news release the option was granted by Kaiser Steel Corp. of Oakland, Calif., at $44 a share, up to and including April 15, 1980.

The purchase would involve all of Kaiser Steel Corp.'s shares of Kaiser Resources that are not purchased by Kaiser Resources through its current tender offer for its own shares.

Helliwell said the option is subject to approval of Kaiser Steel's board of directors.

He said BCRIC moved to obtain the option because of Kaiser Resources' strong position on coal development in Western Canada, primarily in the east Kootenays area of eastern B.C.

Kaiser Resources said that following the pro rata purchase of its shares from Kaiser Steel, BCRIC should wind up owning between 21 and 24 per cent of outstanding Kaiser Resources shares.

In that event, Kaiser Resources said it will invite BCRIC's chief executive officer to become a member of its board of directors.

Kaiser also announced today it is increasing to $44 from $43 a share the price of its pro rata tender offer to shareholders made Feb. 15 to purchase up to nine million of the company's 27 million outstanding shares.

On Monday, BCRIC announced an agreement in principle to buy more than 14 per cent of MacMillan Bloedel's common shares, including Canadian Pacific Investment Ltd's 13.4-per-cent share of the forest products firm, largest in B.C.

The purchase will cost more than $107 million of the estimated $500 million in cash BCRIC accumulated during the government-inspired share giveaway and sale last summer.

Helliwell said in a statement the agreement means BCRIC will buy the 13.4 per cent of MacMillan Bloedel shares owned by CP Investments.

BCRIC is also contemplating purchase of another one per cent of MacMillan Bloedel's shares held in five pension plans associated with Canadian Pacific Ltd.

Sale price of the 2,849,600 shares held by CP Investments will be $35 each. MacMillan Bloedel shares were trading at $33 each at the market close Monday.

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY

The son of an elderly woman waiting for cataract surgery came forward today to defend Victoria eye specialist Dr. Don North.

Ken Leighton, whose mother is North's patient, said the hospital waiting list problem is as critical as North claims.

Leighton said his 85-year-old mother gets more depressed every day waiting for cataract surgery she won't be able to have for at least seven months.

Mrs. Leighton was told last July she needed the operation, but was unable to undergo surgery at Victoria General Hospital in September as scheduled because of a respiratory illness.

His mother recovered and saw Dr. North for the first time Dec. 31, when the doctor told her the operation was "long overdue."

However, North's receptionist said today surgery dates can't be booked until September or October.

North is limited by the hospital to two operations a week and Victoria General will not book surgery more than six months in advance.

Dr. North has a list of patients waiting to get on the hospital's waiting list, the receptionist said.

The doctor can't favor some patients over others by referring them for urgent surgery.

They're all serious cases, she said.

Dr. North was accused by Health Minister Rafe Mair of making inflammatory remarks about delays in hospital admissions.

Dr. North says the minister attacked him as an easy way out.

Mair said allegations by Dr. North several weeks ago that an elderly cataract patient became irreversibly blind because of delayed hospital admissions are entirely without documentation.

The minister said he reviewed case files and found all major decisions about the patient's surgery were made by North himself. Royal Jubilee Hospital, where the booking was made, acted properly, he added.

North charged last week that the patient's eyesight could have been saved if he hadn't had to wait six months for surgery.

Mair suggested the College of Physicians and Surgeons, responsible for standards of medical practice in B.C., might be interested in the files.

U.S. loan rate pierces 17%

NEW YORK (UPI) — Chase Manhattan Bank, the United States' third biggest, today announced a half-point leap in its prime loan rate to 17¼ per cent, the first bank to pierce the 17 per cent plateau.

The Chase move was followed shortly by ninth-ranked First National Bank of Chicago.

The bank rate boost sent stock prices plunging in fairly active trading.

The Dow Jones industrialaverage, which lost 8.79 points Monday, was off 5.46 points at noon today EST.

Many money market watchers have predicted the prime rate will rise to 18 per cent in the near future as the Fed desparately attempts to combat inflation.

The rate of return on 13-week Treasury bills soared to a record 15.13 per cent late Monday. Because of this hike, brokers said many traders are leaving the stock market because they can get more from the money instruments.

Although the key interest rate charged on loans to a bank's most creditworthy customers has been expected to increase shortly above the record 16 ¾ per cent reached Friday, Chase's move was an immediate reaction to reported credit-tightening Monday by the Federal Reserve.

Big borrowers are most directly affected by prime rate hikes but since the prime also serves as a barometer for all interest rates, consumers will pay more for loans — if they can find them — as a result of the latest increase.

Ferry rates up, Bennett hints

The cabinet will be very tough on any request for an excessive increase in ferry rates, Premier Bill Bennett said today.

But almost in the same breath he hinted that a hike may be inevitable.

The premier cited the soaring cost of fuel as a reason why the government might have to consider higher rates.

A request from the B.C. Ferry Corporation is expected to go to cabinet before the end of the month.

B.C. Ferries general manager Charles Gallagher has suggested an increase of $2 or $3 in the basic $9 rate for transporting vehicles one-way on the main routes between Vancouver Island and the Mainland.

Passenger fares would remain unchanged.

The proposed increases as percentages are 22.2 per cent or 33.3 per cent.

Bennett refused to say whether he considers this proposal "excessive."

The premier said more than a year ago that with the provincial subsidy to the Ferry Corporation indexed to the cost of living, no fare increases would be necessary.

He said today the subsidy should total more than $60 million this year but a fare increase may still be needed to deal with the rising cost of fuel and wages.

Robert Mugabe grins broadly at news of his landslide win

S. Africa warns Rhodesia

Reuters

Black African countries expressed delight today at Black nationalist leader Robert Mugabe's landslide victory in the Rhodesian elections, but the result drew a warning for the future from white-ruled South Africa.

South African Prime Minister Pieter Botha said in a statement: "The result is a decision by the people of Rhodesia. They will have to work it out for themselves and live with it."

Botha added the warning that any neighbor which allows its territory to be used for attacks on South Africa will "have to face all the force of the republic's strength."

In Salisbury, Mugabe announced he was forming a new government including his chief guerrilla rival and the country's minority whites.

"This is a great moment," Mugabe, 55, told reporters after he was asked by Britain's interim governor, Lord Soames, to become prime minister and name a government to lead the country to legal independence.

Tens of thousands of people rushed into the streets when Mugabe's victory was announced, cheering, waving branches, dancing and waving posters reading "Forward with the revolution."

Army helicopter gunships roared low over the black townships of Salisbury in an effort to keep the jubiliant mood from spilling over into the predominantly white downtown district and possible violence.

Thousands of white army troops in battle dress and equipped with armored cars and artillery rushed to the edges of the black areas of the city to contain the celebrations.

In a nationwide radio and television broadcast, Rhodesian Registrar General Eric Pope-Simmonds announced that in last week's general election, Mugabe had captured 1,668,992 votes, or 62.9 per cent of the ballots counted, giving him

Artist makes his mark undercover, on tiptoe

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — "We call him Leonardo da Toenail," said Sgt. George Farina of the University of Southern California's campus police.

Farina was referring to a man who reportedly has a penchant for crawling underneath library tables and painting the exposed toenails of unsuspecting coeds at USC.

The Case of the Phantom Pedicurist first broke when one of the alleged victims noticed she had a fresh coat of polish on her toenails after leaving Doheny Library, Farina said.

The nails had been pink when she walked in; green when she walked out.

"Maybe she thought it was a fraternity prank at first," Farina said of the unidentified coed. "But she found another woman in her apartment who had had the same experience and they decided to contact authorities."

Campus police quickly found a man in his mid-20s — neither a student nor a library employee — who was carrying a bag with about 15 bottles of fingernail polish inside.

However, painting someone's toenails without permission is only a misdemeanor. And since officers must witness a misdemeanor to make an arrest, the man was set free.

Talk about beating the bushes for votes!

Socred MLA George Mussallem says the Sasquatch should be given total protection — he may turn out to be a voter — even a Socred voter.

Two years ago, the member from Dewdney proposed a private member's bill designed to protect the elusive creature.

In an interview today, he said if it becomes necessary he'll bring his legislation in again.

Mussallem said Sasquatches are certain to be free enterprisers and therefore Social Credit supporters.

In fact, says Mussallem, he wouldn't be surprised to see one elected to the Legislature.

"I think you would find one taking a prominent place in our party."

With a straight face, he added, "The Rhinoceros Party is a joke. This is no joke."

Pub patrons pine for Polly

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Polly the parrot, an ornery, bad-tempered bird who was the official mascot of a bar in this rough-and-ready mill town, has been birdnapped.

The captors crept into the hotel lobby home of the Amazon parrot in the middle of the night, snatched their victim and flew the coop 11 days ago.

Now the staff and hard-drinking patrons of Polly's Pub, named after the bird, fear the worst, especially as the feathered barfly needs special medication to ward off the effects of the damp, sulphurous air of this Vancouver Island pulp mill community.

There has been no ransom note from the kidnappers and no leads to the whereabouts of Polly, so named despite his sex.

A local resident said to have the powers of extra-sensory perception gazed meaningfully at a photograph of the parrot, but could only elicit the information that he was still alive.

"Everyone has been asking about the bird," Ron Parker, manager of the inn where Polly has made his home since October, 1978, said Monday. "There have been no results yet.

"I knew this would happen sooner or later in this town," said Parker, in his grief at the loss. "They have a mentality here that this kind of thing is a challenge."

Parker said the bird, which occasionally looked bedraggled, had recently been taking medication to keep it healthy. The kidnappers might not have taken Polly if they had realized the state of his health, he said.

A $150 reward has been offered for the parrot's return. The bird, about 2½ to 3 years old, is valued at about $1,000.

The bird was loved despite of, or perhaps because of, a foul temper, said Parker. People who thought that Polly's jolly plumage reflected his nature were often surprised when they extended a finger through the bars of his cage to pet him. Polly was as adept at crunching fingers as sunflower seeds.

Parker suspects one motive of the kidnappers could be revenge.

"He broke dozens of watches," on unwelcome wrists extended into his cage, said Parker. "He pulled out buttons on shirts, he would refuse to go back into his cage."

The Admiral's Cat is the cat's meow, according to her owner, retired admiral Dick Leir.

The admiral and his Family Catboat took part in Sidney's own boat show on the weekend, strutting their stuff in one of the most unique shows of its kind.

Organized by National Boat Sales of White Birch Road, the show featured boats that are built locally, most of them designed by local marine architects.

The catboat is a familiar sight on the east coast where it first came into prominence at Cape Cod and Chesapeake Bay in the 1780s when roads were almost non-existent and the catboat was used to haul the family cow and produce to market.

Marine architect Bill Garden, who lives on Toad's Landing off Sidney, designed the show-stealer of the Sidney show. Internationally-known for the variety of boats he's designed, Garden is playing a major role in the resurgence of the boat-building industry in this part of the world.

In the case of the Family Cat, he took the best features of the waterborne workhorses of earlier days and translated them into a craft that will appeal to boaters who want a craft that stands out in these days of conformity.

As Leir put it, "I went to both the Vancouver and Toronto boat shows this year and all you could see was a bunch of wedding cakes."

The Family Cat measures 23 feet over-all and has a wide beam of 10 feet. When her retractable keel is raised her draft is only two feet, three inches. Keel down, she draws six feet. With her economical eight horse-power Yanmar diesel she motors happily at six knots.

Built by Bill Boyd Boats for Saturna Yachts Inc. of Saanich, her cabin and cockpit are lavishly finished in wood. The cabin is heated by a stove that burns both wood and coal.

Boyd began building Family Cats last June. Nine have already been launched and three of them have been sold to United States customers.

Garden works hand-in-glove with Sidney boatbuilders.

Denny Coverdale of Philbrooks Shipyard said Garden is always at hand for advice when he's needed. Philbrooks had a Philbrooks E 3200 Express Trawler, an original and sophisticated design from the drawing board of Enno Lepnurm, at the Sidney show.

Garden, who said the Family Cat was the most photogenic of his boats in the Sidney show, also had others that demanded attention. These were the Truant 33 and Triant 370 pilothouse sloops, built by Saturna Yachts Inc. and Truant Marine of Salt Spring Island respectively.

Garden, whose name has become synonomous with his many designs of traditional sailboats, says whether his design is sail or power, the design he is working on at any given moment becomes his obsession until it is completed.

Two other local designers were featured in the Sidney show. There was a Pacific Pilot 27 motorsailor, designed by Sidney architect John Lovett for Skookum Manufacturing, and a Coaster 23, a four-berth diesel cruiser, designed by Dick Chudley of R.F.C. Marine Ltd. in Sidney.

TOWN TALK

Anyone who thinks a hydrofoil service between Victoria and Seattle is a good idea ought to ask Hawaiian Islanders what they think, says Frank Keifer, 504 Linden.

Keifer said he's writing a letter to Sam Bawlf, a major force behind a private company pushing for the service, to tell him about the failed hydrofoil run between the Hawaiian Islands.

Boeing's Seaflight hydrofoil ran for three years plagued with constant breakdowns and was finally pulled off the route this year, he said.

The idea is twice as ridiculous for the Victoria-Seattle run, Keifer says, because with all the kelp and deadheads floating in the strait it would be easy for a hydrofoil — which has a cruising speed of 42 knots — to suck up all kinds of debris in its powerful pumps.

Keifer also pointed out that on a trial run of a jetfoil service in the summer of 1978 the craft was unable to gather enough speed to leave the Inner Harbor because it picked up too much debris. The jetfoil had to be towed back by a passing charter boat.

Strathcona Park Lodge owner Jim Boulding's as pleased as punch today.

The reason? Boulding played midwife Monday, delivering a bouncing eight-pound, seven-ounce boy in the back seat of a car parked at the side of the highway.

Seems Mr. and Mrs. Art Twiggs, speeding to Campbell River from Gold River in a desperate bid to beat the stork, pulled in at the lodge seeking a doctor when it was apparent that the baby's arrival was imminent.

No doctor was handy so a small convoy headed off with the Twiggs followed by Boulding and lodge employee Nancy Brown.

Two miles down the road, the Twiggs stopped and the baby started.

There were no problems and mom and baby are in great shape in hospital.

The 25 South Park elementary youngsters couldn't have picked a better time to tour Victoria' fire hall than Monday afternoon.

Firefighters Ted Alexis and Dave Noren had just finished showing the kids the different apparatus and explaining its use when an apartment block fire alarm sounded at 1204 Yates next door to the hall.

Alexis and Noren jumped on the back of the truck and the kids streamed out the front door and watched as the fire crew put out the blaze in a third-floor suite.

Firemen said the blaze, caused by careless smoking, did about $6,000 damage. No one was in the apartment.

If you're waiting for the report on staffing standards at James Bay Lodge promised by Health Minister Rafe Mair, don't hold your breath.

It's three months since Mair said he would look into the situation at James Bay, where two elderly residents died in falls, but he had no answer ready when the issue was raised in the legislature Monday.

Mair took the question from NDP critic Dennis Cocke on notice.

Soon after announcing his inquiry into the James Bay Lodge matter, Mair said he was expanding the investigation to include staffing requirements in all long-term care facilities. That investigation is still going on, the minister said recently.

Biggest hand in the house Monday went to a guest introduced by Esquimalt-Port Renfrew NDP MLA Frank Mitchell.

"I ask you to welcome the one and only Gordon Townsend," Mitchell said.

Townsend — a dyed in the wool NDP supporter — had his named used by an unknown writer in letters to the editor which were critical of NDP policies.

The B.C. government pension plan may have more than $1 billion in unfunded liabilities but, says Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe: "We are in good shape in B.C."

At least B.C.'s pension plan is partially funded, Wolfe said Monday. Many other government plans are not.

The minister said the B.C. plan, like all other pension plans in North America, is caught in the inflation spiral.

Revised hotel okayed

The design of a hotel proposed for Douglas and Herald streets, rejected by city council last November as a "piece of junk," has been approved after redesign.

Sandman Inns Ltd., a Vancouver-based company run by the family of former Social Credit highways minister Phil Gaglardi, was given permission today by the land use planning committee to erect a six-storey, 120-room hotel with restaurant, swimming pool and underground parking.

Architect Henry Pimiskern said the hotel will cost between $4 and $5 million.

City council last fall rejected the original design as unsuitable for the strategic location at the entrance to downtown.

Saanich's street pitch short of money mark

Saanich came hat in hand to Victoria City Hall today asking for funds to help complete Finlayson Street through to Hillside shopping centre but council's traffic committee gave moral support only and called for Saanich to put its money up front.

Alderman Sandy Noel said Saanich is willing to pay for extending the street across Bowker Creek to link up with North Dairy Road but it would like Victoria to help pay for part of the drainage project required to extend the road.

The committee referred to a 1978 motion by Victoria city council which said the city had no objection to putting Finlayson through to Shelbourne — to link up Mayfair and Hillside shopping centres — but it was not a high priority and Victoria was not interested in sharing the cost with its neighbor to the north.

Alderman Bob Wright said Saanich now wants two things, the city's support and the city's money.

"We give you our blessings and good wishes to complete that," he told Noel.

"The second thing is a little harder."

City Engineer John Sansom said the minimum cost of putting the creek inside a culvert would probably be $25,000. Noel also said additional storm drains would have to be built and Victoria should also pay part of the cost since some of the water flowing into Bowker Creek comes from Victoria.

Finlayson and North Dairy form the boundary between the two municipalities in this area.

Sansom and the committee laughed at Noel's claim of storm waters crossing the border. The engineer said the catchment area is totally inside Saanich.

Ald. Bill McElroy said the city will have to do dye tests to see if any Victoria storm drains feed into the creek at that point.

In the end the committee voted to support the street extension in principle but asked Noel to come back with a firm figure on estimate costs. Victoria city planning department was also instructed to look into the proposal and report back to the committee.

McElroy said the extension would benefit Victoria by protecting the residential neighborhood just north of Hillside, which now sees a lot of traffic trying to find its way from Finlayson to the Hillside shopping centre. The extension would also ease traffic congestion on Hillside from Cedar Hill to Shelbourne, McElroy said.

But the principal disadvantage would be to increase traffic on Finlayson, which is mainly a residential street.

Six new theatres coming

The Capitol Theatre at Blanshard and Yates Street is to be demolished and $3½ million replacement containing six separate theatres is to be erected on the site.

City council's land use planning committee today approved a demolition permit for Famous Players Inc.

City planner Geoff Greenhalgh said the new theatre complex will also occupy the parking lot at the rear of the existing Capitol Theatre.

Agreement reached on Turgoose housing

After nearly two years of negotiations, Canada Trust and Central Saanich council appear to have reached agreement on a major development on 25½ acres the company owns near Turgoose Point, east of the Pat Bay highway near Mount Newton crossroad.

The proposal calls for a mix of high class single-family, townhouse and apartment units and represents the largest single housing development ever undertaken in the municipality.

Council Monday night gave unanimous support for the conditions of a land use contract negotiated to date and referred the matter to the advisory planning commission for recommendation.

Ald. George MacFarlane, chairman of council's subdivision and zoning committee said in an interview today a public hearing into the proposal could be held as early as April 8 when two other smaller applications for rezoning are set to be heard.

Municipal development officer Gay Wheeler said the proposal includes 19 single-family dwellings to be built on one-quarter of the property, 175 apartment units in four separate three-storey blocks on another quarter, and 106 townhouses on the remaining portion.

The development is scheduled to take eight years but could be completed sooner if demand warrants it.

Wheeler said the company has agreed to dedicate 2.56 acres of waterfront to the municipality for parkland and has promised to build walkways and beach access paths.

Weight woes hit schools

There is a disturbingly high incidence of overweight students in B.C. schools, says an education ministry report released Monday.

The report also said tests on 3,000 students in Grades 3, 7, and 11 showed the physical fitness and motor ability of secondary school females; and of males and female elementary school pupils are poor.

The report indicates that students' knowledge and understanding of physical education are lacking.

By PAT DUFOUR

A merger of Vancouver Island Transit Ltd. with the urban transport operations, effective April 1, was announced by Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm Monday.

"In order to introduce greater economies into the sytem and to afford users improved service, I believe it makes good sense to integrate all of the best services that are to form the regional transport system because the regional district will be planning the entire system," the minister said.

VITL at present provides bus services on the Saanich Peninsula to Sidney and Swartz Bay and in the Western Community as far as Sooke.

"From time to time over the past few years additional services have been introduced by VITL but the service has never been sufficient to meet the growing demands of the area residents," Vander Zalm said.

He said the growing demand for bus service in the more densely populated areas of the Saanich Peninsula and the Western Community requires an ability to respond efficiently and quickly to those demands.

The minister said the new services will probably be more in line with the urban style operations of the Metropolitan Transit Operating Company (the urban transit operating agency of the provincial government for Greater Victoria and Greater Vancouver) rather than the inter-city operation of Pacific Coach Lines.

The labor agreement between VITL and the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATU) representing VITL employees is identical to that between B.C. Hydro Transit and its successor, the MTOC, and the ATU.

The provincial government established the Urban Transit Authority in 1978 to enable local governments to determine local transit services, routes and fares and established a cost-sharing formula between the two levels of government.

Regional district, company and labor representatives attending Monday's meeting all expressed approval of the new merger.

Union members said they are prepared to make sure the transaction goes smoothly.

Toronto

The Toronto stock market dropped sharply in active mid-afternoon trading Tuesday.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in shares of Brascan Ltd. and Western Mines Ltd. was halted at 2 p.m. pending an announcement. The stocks last traded at $27¾ and $22½ respectively.

Trading in shares of British Columbia Resources Investment Corp., which was halted at the opening, resumed and by 2 p.m. the stock was up ⅛ to $8¾.

The company announced that it has agreed in principle to buy the 13.4-per-cent interest in MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. held by Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd.

Trading in Kaiser Resources Ltd., which was also halted at the opening, resumed and by 2 p.m. the stock was down 2 to $36.

Kaiser said it raised the price of its pro rata tender offer to buy up to nine million of the company's 27,034,105 shares to $44 from $43.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, gaining .22 to $8.85 on 512,248 shares and Proflex Ltd. dropped .02 to .32 on 7,000. Taro Industries dropped ⅛ to $5¾ on 6,925 and Austin Investment Corp. remained unchanged at .51 on 3,000. Ardiem Industrial Corp. remained steady at .25 and Northway Gestalt remained unchanged at $2.00.

On the resource and development board, Liberty Petroleum dropped .15 to $5.10 on 502,700 shares and San Jacinto Explorations rose .02 to .63 on 195,900. Tyee Lake Resources Ltd. advanced a nickel to .53 on 78,000 and Pacific Resources remained unchanged at .72 on 71,900. Kamad Silver Co. gained a dime to $3.35 and Kent Energy Corp. gained .07 to $1.10.

Tagus Resources led trading on the curb exchange, dropping a dime to $2.70 on 82,900 shares.

New York

The New York stock market posted a broad loss Tuesday as hopes faded on Wall Street for any strong new government measures against inflation.

The market rallied late last week amid speculation that the Carter administration was planning some new anti-inflation actions, such as credit controls.

But as the weekend, and then Monday, passed without any announcement of such measures, selling pressure intensified in both the stock and bond markets.

Several large banks raised their prime lending rates Tuesday to a record of 17¼ ⅝Wwzper cent.

Florida Power and Light led the active list, off 1⅛ to $20¼. A 1,473,000-share block traded at $20.
